HAIL FITZ AND GERMANS IN BIG PARADE

By WIN BROOKS

In mighty embrace, Old Dame Boston today gathered into her arms the three comrades of the only westward, heavier-than-air flight across the Atlantic.

The Old Dame herself—the official old dame—was very quiet and reserved. She wept a little in pride over Maj. Fitzmaurice. Through those tears of pride she beamed upon Baron von Huenefeld and Capt. Koehl. Very sedate, the Old Dame.

But, her children! Oh, her children!

There were 500,000 of them—one-half million of them—and they gave to the Bremen's crew the largest, noisiest, most enthusiastic, and altogether the greatest, welcome that anybody ever received in this supposedly staid old city.

They yelled themselves hoarse, at the Huntington ave. station, when the German-Irish fliers arrived at 10:49 a. m., one minute ahead of schedule. They outdid themselves with a reception at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, a reception and several luncheons.

And then they paraded. How they did parade! Not since the return from the World War of the 26th Division has Boston witnessed a scene the like of it. Overcast skies could not dispel the spontaneous smile of that welcoming gesture.

PARADE LINE THRONGED

Along the line of march through the Bay Bay district to Park sq. the crowds behind the ropes—more of the old dame's children—numbered upwards of half-million figure. Boston took a leaf from New York's reception book—or perhaps it was several million leaves from telephone books—and sent down upon the marchers a veritable snowstorm.

Then there was Governor Fuller's reception at the State House and the state exercises attending the presentation of medals to the three fliers Not all Old Dame Boston's children could get into the State House. But they tried mighty hard.

And then the public reception on the Common. The Common reception was not any greater than that held when Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlain, Hegenberger and the rest were here. Because the Common in proximity to the Parkman Bandstand would not hold a bigger crowd.

The out-stretched arms and the ample lap of Old Dame Boston received the three heroes of the Bremen's flight 11 minutes before noon.

A tumultuous welcome that belied the fanciful tradition of coolness and reserve was accorded Baron von Huenefeld, Maj. Fitzmaurice and Capt. Koehl as they alighted at the Huntington ave. station.

The screams of sirens, the shriek of whistles, the blast of horns and a milling, shouting crowd of old men, young men, old women and girls. A reception committee all aflutter with dignity and importance as reception committees must be.

ASKED FOR MONOCLE

"Oh, Fitzie!"

"Hi, Baron, where the monocle?"

"Hey, Koehl, a smile—a smile!"

Ever since they left Greenly Island, members of the crew of the transatlantic Junkers plane have been quoted as washing to visit the Hub. And today, as they alighted from the Boston & Albany train that had borne them from Detroit, they gave every indication that the dispatches were true.

"We're glad to be here," said Baron von Huenefeld as he stepped onto the station platform with Mayor Nichols, who was

DETROIT, May 18—Self-confidence usually means success. When John L. Sullivan met the Prince of Wales, grandfather of today's prince, Jem Smith, heavyweight champion of England, was present, and in training to fight Kilrain.

Sullivan, who was to box for the prince's delectation with his sparring partner, Jack Ashton, said to the prince:

"Your English champion is here, trained to fight. I'm just off the boat and fat. Tell your champion to get into that ring with me. If I don't knock him out in two rounds, I'll go back to America."

The prince was delighted, but Jem Smith's manager said no. A fight with no gate money, and with Sullivan had no appeal. So Sullivan boxed with Ashton, Jem Smith boxed with Alf Greenfield. The prince, and this writer, only newspaper man there, were disappointed.

Detroit feels about Detroit as Sullivan felt about himself. Joseph Mulcahy, who was born in New York, and now edits the Detroit Times, says, with perfect seriousness:

"Detroit, today, is what New York was twenty-five years ago. Fifty years from now, men will be saying 'New York is what Detroit was twenty-five years ago.'"

Every day is Henry Ford's busy day, but today was unusually busy. He arrived from Philadelphia in the morning to greet the Bremen fliers, who saw his plant, and had luncheon with Edsel Ford, head of the committee to receive them.

Then Ford welcomed Junkers, who built the Bremen, and talked engineering with him. "A fine product of Germany's thorough

COOLIDGE IN ANDOVER TALK STRESSES NEED FOR ACCURACY IN LIFE

By GEORGE E. DURNO

Andover, May 19—Cheered by thousands, and with a National Guard battery of field artillery firing a presidential salute of 21 guns, President and Mrs. Coolidge arrived today for the 150th anniversary of Phillips Academy.

Their special train from Washington pulled in at 9 a. m., 10 minutes ahead of schedule.

Mounted state troopers were on hand during the President's progress through the street of this beautiful New England college town.

REIGH COUNT CHOICE IN KENTUCKY DERBY

Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., May 19 (AP)—With the Derby field reduced to 23 by the withdrawal of Mop Up, Dowagiac and Rumpelstiltskin, it appeared certain that not more than 21 horses of the 26 named yesterday would face the barrier for the 54th Kentucky Derby and its prize of $50,000 late this afternoon.

The two other doubtful starters are Lawley and Bar None. If 21 horses go to the post, it will be the biggest Derby field since 1923.

'Flying for Hub When Forced Down'--Koehl

By FRED TOYE
(Interview on train en route from Springfield to Boston)

WHILE fighting the elements above the snow-covered wastes of Labrador, the crew of the transatlantic plane Bremen made plans to land in Boston as the nearest American city with a good airport.

This was disclosed today by Capt. Koehl as he sped toward Boston with Maj. Fitzmaurice and Baron von Huenefeld aboard the Chicago-Boston flier.

Capt. Koehl revealed that, when he and his shipmates saw that making their destination was probably hopeless, they planned to make the flight as thoroughly successful as they could by landing here, instead of New York.

As hour after hour passed, however, without sighting habitations, they came to realize that they could not even get this far and thus they were ready to chance a landing at Greenly when the welcome lighthouse came into view.

MAY BE FIRST TO LAND IN HUB

"Boston hopes to become a base for overseas fliers, perhaps you will be the first to make it such a landing," the interviewer suggested to the intrepid pilots, and Capt. Koehl showed enthusiasm as he answered: "Yes, that's possible."

The outstanding point in Baron von Huenefeld's interview, aside from his praise of American patriotism and good will, was his pleasure at seeing pictures of the medals the American Legion prepared to present to him and the other Bremen fliers here.

"It is very touching, inspiring, to know the American Legion bears such sentiment toward us," said the Baron. "It one of the party to meet the fliers in Worcester and come with them to Boston.

"We're more than delighted to have you," responded the mayor. "We're one minute ahead of schedule." And they were. As if to show them she had done her very ding-bustedness in their honor, the heavy train from the west was one minute early in arrival.

The throng at the station had no eyes for the mayor, nor for Police Commissioner Herbert Wilson nor for Kurt von Tippelskirch, the German consul, or others of the party.

"Where are the fliers?"

Here they are! The baron first down, laughing like a school boy. Monacle? Sure. How's it go? The crowd roared its appreciation.

Fitzmaurice, next. Fitzie to this town where Fitzmaurice and Fitzpatrick are always Fitzies. Fitzmaurice and his Irish smile. And a quickening race of Irish blood in the crowd on hand.

Koehl next. The "flier of the night." Grim, unsmiling pilot of the World War whose machine gun once may have been trained through the propellers of his racing plane against a ship flown by this same Fitzie over No Man's Land.

KOEHL GREETED NEXT

No longer grim Koehl. A smile upon his lips. He waves his hand.

From the very last car of the long train they came, escorted by the mayor and George Johnson, director of public celebrations. Up the long platform they walked to the accompanying cheers, and there each in his turn was introduced to the various members of the reception committee, the army and navy officials spic and span as for dress parade, Judge Collis, President "Tommy" Green of the City Council and Ambassador Smiddy of the Irish Free State.

Salute and a handshake. Salute and another handshake. Down the line. That the Baron and Fitzie. Koehl, more solemn, hat in hand, revealing a high, broad forehead, gave no salute, but offered his hand.

Fitzmaurice, slim, trim, debonair in the uniform of the flying corps he commands. Below his close-cropped mustache a cigarette.

Capt. Koehl and the Baron in "civies," the ribbon of one decoration in the lapel buttonhole of their coats.

They posed for photos.

"Give us a good smile now, Fitzie," said the mayor.

Capt. Fitzmaurice responded. The crowd roared again.

Photographers set up a clamor for a picture of the mayor and Capt. Koehl shaking hands.

"We've got to do it again," said Mayor Nichols.

"Once more, and may it not be the last," replied the pilot.

From the crowd to the reception group, eluding the police, slipped a young chap with a signature book in his hand. He came to a breathless stop in front of Baron von Huenefeld.

The German baron, who staked his life and his last pfennig on a glorious adventure that sheer desperation decreed could not fail, gave the youth a smile, but shook his head.

"No, please," he said.

The youth, disconsolate, was escorted from the scene by an officer.

Thousands lined the Dartmouth st. and Huntington ave. railroad bridges as the party proceeded to the waiting automobiles which carried them to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

The Bremen's crew occupied the rear seat of a seven-passenger touring car. In the smaller seats in the rear sat Mayor Nichols with his son, Dexter. In the front seat with the driver was George Johnson and hanging onto the running board, hatless and in the best of humor, "Tommy" Green.

The rest of the reception committee followed in several machines, the entourage moving onto Huntington ave. to Exeter st.

Thousands Line Back Bay R. R. Bridges in Greeting

Every window on the Exeter st. side of the Copley Square Hotel framed one face or more. A snow storm that is atypical of Boston's previous receptions began—snow in the shape of paper, phone books torn to bits, newspapers—anything handy. Abreast the Hotel Lenox the storm increased.

Thousands lined the course of the impromptu parade to the Ritz. In the lobby of the Ritz it was almost impossible to move so dense was the crowd. Everybody from manager to porter made up the hotel reception committee, it seemed.

But the fliers did not stop in the lobby. They were pushed into the nearest elevator and whisked to the 15th floor. The entire floor was reserved for them, and there they waited until the parade began.

Only one incident marred the procession of the fliers from the station to the hotel. That was when they were abreast the Ritz. A screen, pushed loose by a guest eager to see all that was going on, fell from the eighth floor of the hotel upon the head of Francis Duggan of Rutland sq., South End. He was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital.

At the hotel, Maj. Fitzmaurice confirmed the report that the gallant trio expect to attempt the eastward flight across the Atlantic. The plans are tentatively made for a take-off from St. John's, Newfoundland, in three weeks, the Irish flier stated.

Boston, Capt. Koehl revealed, was picked as a landing place for the Bremen while the ship hovered, spent, over the snow wastes of Labrador just before she was forced down on Greenly. The crew saw they could not make New York, he said, and decided to land in Boston as the nearest American city with an adequate airport.

Rest in Hotel Suite Before Parade Starts

All expressed hope that the Junkers plane which they were forced to abandon in Detroit yesterday would be repaired and flown to Boston so they might depart by air route Monday morning. They received with pleasure dispatches which indicated the plane would be ready.

On of the first of what seemed a thousand floral tributes received at the Ritz-Carlton was a bouquet of roses sent Baron von Huenefeld by his Boston cousin, Edgar Levenstein, a retired wool merchant.

"It is a pleasure to receive something from somebody near to home," said the Baron. "I am glad Edgar sent this token. It is not only for myself. It is for the three of us."

A gift of an American flag and a necklace which Miss Hope Landin, of Chicago, had arranged for Patricia Fitzmaurice, daughter of the Irish pilot, was presented to the major at the hotel.

The police arrangements were perfectly handled under the personal supervision of Superintendent Michael H. Crowley. He had a small army of blue uniformed, capable men at his disposal, and they did an excellent job.

At the Ritz Carlton, for the second time, Baron von Huenefeld was approached to sign his name in an autograph book. Julius Ober, of Ward st., Newton Center, made the request and perhaps the baron was feeling bady for having dismissed the first applicant, for he said:

"Will you wait for a time until I have had lunch. I am very hungry. I'll be glad to give you my autograph at that time."

In the vast Common throng, several women fainted. Others so closely held that they could not move without aid were extricated by police who fought through the dense pack of humanity.

Director of Celebrations Johnson presided at the Common exercises. Seven addresses, not all of them brief, held the attention of the throng while Fitzmaurice, Koehl and the baron looked on and beamed and listened.

Mayor Rides With Fliers in Second Parade Car

The speakers were Governor Fuller, Mayor Nichols, Judge Walter L. Collins, Congressman Douglas, Maj.-Gen. Preston Brown, Rear Admiral Phillip H. Andrews and Minister Smiddy.

Tonight there is the reception and meeting at the Arena, and tomorrow there will be a military memorial mass in Fenway Park.

Tomorrow afternoon the fliers will be given opportunity to rest, or to tour the city and historic spots near Boston. They leave for Albany, N. Y., on Monday morning. If the Junkers plane F-13 can be flown to Boston in time, the Bremen three will hop off in this craft at 10 o'clock Monday morning from the Boston Airport.

The baron wasn't the only person hungry. But before food the three fliers elected the refreshment of a shower. And from beneath needle streams of icy water they shouted their desires for lunch.

Luncheon was served in their rooms immediately after. With them were the German consul, Minister Smiddy and their personal representative, Blythe.

At 1:45 they descended to an informal reception accorded them at the mayor's luncheon to the committees. Then they retired to their floor for a half hour's rest until parade time.

As the parade started to form at Arlington and Beacon sts., the first hint of mist, threatening since the sun disappeared behind gray cumulus, was in the air. Nothing daunted and still smiling, the Bremen trio left the Ritz at 2:20 p. m. and took their place in the second automobile in the line.

So dense were the throngs about the starting point that motorcycle officers cleared a path through the crowd that swarmed through the ropes.

At the head of the cavalcade rode George Johnson and several of the official reception committee. Next came the fliers, perched on the folded top of their open car, the better to see and be seen by the cheering thousands.

Maj.-Gen. Alfred F. Foote, newly-appointed leader of the 26th Division, rode ahead of the marchers. Behind him came the 13th United States Infantry, Provisional Battalion, U. S. N.; special troops of the 26th Division; an ammunition train and several regiments of infanty, artillery, and engineers of the Massachusetts National Guard. Veterans of the Spanish and Foreign Wars organization and of the American Legion and a battalion of Boston High School Cadets followed.

The route took them through Beacon st., to Hereford to Newbury, through Newbury to Dartmonth, and down St. James ave., to Park sq., where the parade ended.

Mayor Nichols rode with the fliers in the second car. Two other cars followed carrying Minister Smiddy de Groot and others close to the official party.

From Park sq. the fliers were driven directly to the State House, where they were serenaded with German and Irish airs by the Shriners' Band. There followed the presentation of the state medals in recognition of the westward flight. Only four such medals were ever given before these, to Lindbergh, Byrd, Hegenberger and Maitland.

Beacon Hill was black with the thousands of spectators who raced to advantageous positions on the Common when the appearance of the committee on the steps indicated that the state exercises were over.

Mayor Would Expend Million on Airport

"I WOULD be willing to spend a million dollars for the improvement of Boston Airport," said Mayor Nichols today while discussing the Bremen fliers and their inability to take off" here in the Bremen with a full load because of the inadequacy of the landing field.

"My experts, however, tell me that $250,000 will put the Boston Airport in good condition and I am willing to spend $100,000 of that during the next two years if I can make an advantageous arrangement with the state. I am sure my successor will be glad to spend the remaining $150,000.

"The state is apparently trying to drive a bargain, however, and I do not believe the city of Boston should spend such a large sum of money unless we can get a long-term lease—of say 40 to 50 years. I think a 20-year lease as suggested by the state is not long enough to insure such a large expenditure."

'FLYING FOR BOSTON WHEN FORCED DOWN,' SAYS KOEHL

makes me very happy. You know, the legion sent us their good wishes before we took off from Baldonnell.

"It is wonderful to realize that men who had been enemies in battle can be comrades in peace."

BARON HAPPY AT HONORS PAID HIM

Tall and slender, even more fragile looking than his pictures indicate, the baron appeared extremely happy at the honors being paid him day after day, and like his comrades seemed in the best of health as he sat resting in the speeding train. He spoke perfect English.

"It's a great treat to be in America," he said. "I am intensely interested in your country and cannot help but be greatly impressed at its achievements. Moreover, in your business life, government and everything, I see evidenced a wonderful spirit of co-operation, public spirit, patriotism.

"Since I was in America two and a half years ago, you have made tremendous strides in aviation. My visit to the Ford airport was a revelation."

Capt. Koehl, whom the baron called the foremost pilot in Germany, talked quietly and precisely about aviation. His cool gray-blue eyes took in the passing scenery as he talked. The questions was translated into German for him, but he answered in English.

"WONDERFUL MATERIAL IN U. S."

"What strikes me most is the wonderful material you have in this country for making and equipping airplanes and airplane-engines," he said. "You have the finest steel in the world and everything else you need to forge ahead in aviation.

"It is quite evident that the United States is advancing rapidly in this field. You have not yet developed passenger flying as far as Europe has, but you are making great progress in commercial flying.

"The matter of safety is the primary one in regard to passenger flying. The safety factor must be considered as regards airports as well as machines.

"America has a great future in aviation because of her vast capital and the long distances to be covered. I cannot praise American airplane motors too highly. They are excellent.

"I am much pleased to visit Boston because I know you have two airports bordering on the ocean. The ocean is wonderful.

Irish Stew, Schnitzel, for Bremen 3 Lunch

WHEN Maj. Fitzmaurice sat down to lunch at the Ritz Carlton he found on the menu a familiar item, namely "Irish stew a la Fitzmaurice."

Baron von Huenefeld likewise discovered his name on the menu, among the entrees which offered "half spring chicken saute Von Huenefeld."

Other special dishes prepared for the famous trio included a soup called "potage aviation," roast prime ribs of beef a la Emerald Isle, Vienna Schnitzel Holstein, and buttered small English lamp chops.

For dessert the fliers had their choice of deep dish rhubarb pie, apple pie Boston chocolate cream pie or fresh strawberry tarts.

How Hub Hails Fliers

LONG before the Bremen fliers were scheduled to arrive an enthusiastic crowd had gathered in the vicinity of the Huntington ave. station and along the route to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Some of them had been in place for hours.

The majority of the throng, judging from overheard snatches of conversation were most interested in Maj. Fitzmaurice, the exploits of the gallant Irishman being a favorite topic.

* * *

Hawkers selling Irish and German flags did a tremendous business, as did the hot dog and tonic vendors.

* * *

Fliers may come and go in this town, but a baseball fan is always a "bug." In Newspaper row, where 20 newsboys were shouting the news of the prospective arrival of the Bremen crew, a youth whose raucous voice drowned out the others was bellowing: "Sox after seventh straight."

* * *

Following his first tour of inspection, Supt. Crowley returned to the Huntington ave. station just before the fliers' train was due, to accompany them and their escort over the route to the Ritz Carlton. He rode in his own car, with his police chauffeur.

* * *

The meanest mother was discovered in the woman who coaxed her five-year-old son to stand still to be fitted for a new coat and cap with promises "to go see the fliers right afterward" and then whispered to her adult companion that "I would not take him in that mob for the world, for he would be crushed."

* * *

Irvington st., in the vicinity of the Huntington ave. station, was roped off by the police, extra details of whom were on duty on Exeter, Stuart and Irvington sts. Early birds were perched on the railroad wall on Stuart st.

* * *

"Jimmie" Parsons, who had charge of arrangements for the round-the-world fliers when they were in Boston, is handling the arrangements at the Ritz, ably assisted by "Bill" Forbush. Albert Keller, managing director of all the Ritz-Carlton hotels in this country, was on from New York with his staff to supervise the reception.

* * *

Traffic Officer John A. Kelly of Station 20, who was a guard for German prisoners at an American camp overseas, went on duty outside the quarters of the fliers in the Ritz shortly before their arrival. He was the first of a continuous detail of policemen who will maintain their guard over the city's guests as long as they are here.

* * *

As the crowd along Arlington st. waited impatiently for the fliers a taxi rolled up to the Ritz and out stepped Ring Lardner, famous humorist and playwright, in a most expansive mood. Apparently convinced that the demonstration was in his honor, he smiled and bowed graciously at the assembled multitude.

FITZMAURICE IS VERY POPULAR IN WORCESTER

The popularity of Maj. Fitzmaurice was shown at Worcester when the train on which the fliers traveled to Boston stopped there for a few minutes. "Hello Fitz," "Hey there, Fitz," were some of the cries addressed to him from the roped off thousands that lined the station platform.

Nearly 100 messenger boys, railroad baggagemen, porters, etc., crowded around the end of the observation car just before the train pulled out for Boston and "Fitz" leaned over and shook hands with all of them. The faces of the crowd beamed as they "mitted" the nonchalant Irishman and judging from the appearance of his face he enjoyed the fun quite as much as they.

COMMISSIONERS' FANCY CLOTHES "LOST" IN HOTEL

For a time today it looked as though Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson and Park Commissioner William P. Long were victims of thieves, and would be forced to attend the Parkman Bandstand exercises in honor of the fliers, in ordinary business suits.

The police commissioner left the two bags containing their cutaways, striped trousers and silk hats at the Ritz Carlton, where an obliging porter promised to care for it.

Later when Commissioner Wilson went back to the hotel to change his clothes, the baggage could not be found. He went to the Huntington ave. station in a sack suit and "iron hat" and his expression matched the hat. Later the missing baggage was found in Mayor Nichols' suite.

KOEHL MAY FLY DETROIT PLANE ACROSS OCEAN

Detroit, May 19 (INS)—Capt. Hermann Koehl may pilot a Detroit-built plane eastward across the Atlantic within a year, it was revealed today by Henry Hensen, president of the German-American flying club of Detroit.

Before departing for Boston, Capt. Koehl admitted he had conferred with Hansen, but added: "I do not wish to discuss my plans now."

FLIERS PLAN TO HOP TO EUROPE IN 3 WEEKS

By JOHN W. ENGLISH

The Bremen fliers tentatively plan to fly back to Europe within three weeks, taking off from St. John's, N. F., Maj. James C. Fitzmaurice, the genial Irish member of the crew, declared today in an interview as the flier approached Boston by train.

"We are very anxious to fly back to Europe, if it's at all possible," he said. "Whether we shall do so depends on many things. We have many European engagements scheduled and must, in any event, leave the United States early next month.

"If we fly back, it will be from St. John's and in the same worthy plane that brought us to America. We will do it in one stretch of daylight—about 15 hours. If the Bremen is not in condition for the flight, I don't think we shall go back by air.

WAIT FOR BREMEN.

"We are waiting to hear from those who have gone to Greenly Island to inspect the Bremen. From what we hear, they may have to land by parachute, so you see what conditions are up there."

A sketch on the front page of the Boston Evening American caught his eye. It depicted him with his familiar smile, Gaelic words on his lips, and it drew a hearty laugh from him.

"What impressed me most in America?" he went on, repeating the question put to him. Well, I should say the wonderful welcome the people are giving us. I would not have believed it possible. It comes right from their hearts, no doubt about that.

SCORNED RAIN

"Why, in Detroit the people stood in the rain for hours to greet us and did not seem to mind it a bit. It has been wonderful. It has been a revelation. That enthusiasm of Americans which is in evidence everywhere has been the outstanding impression to both my companions and myself.

"Another thing that has impressed me in the United States is the efficiency that is displayed wherever we have been. There is much more rush and bustle here than in Europe. Americans are much more speedy than Europeans. Europeans are far more conservative.

"Still another thing that has impressed me is the manner in which your cities have been laid out. That, of course, is the result of careful planning.

Major Fitzmaurice was in fine fettle, having had a full night's rest.

FULLER GIVES STATE MEDALS TO FLIERS

The title bestowed by acclamation on Col. Charles A. Lindbergh—"Ambassador of Good Will"—was extended to Baron von Huenefeld, Capt. Koehl and Maj. Fitzmaurice today by Governor Alvan T. Fuller, as he presented them with medals from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, at the State House.

"It is with the deepest admiration for your magnificent exploit that I welcome you today on behalf of the people of this Commonwealth," said the Governor. "Your task was indeed one to test the powers of human endurance, and its successful accomplishment stirred the entire nation.

"I like to consider your achievement as one, the effect of which is to break down the false barriers that separate the nations of the world. Your undertaking was an example of co-operation which is extremely gratifying to this country, to whose upbuilding the German and Irish nations have contributed much.

CEMENT NATIONS

"Your visit in America will not pass without abiding friendships being made. It will bring our nations closer together. You deserve the title of Ambassadors of Good Will, and it is good will that the world is needing everywhere today.

"Two of you gentlemen come from Germany. Time marches fast. It is but a little time ago that the world was in turmoil and men's hatreds fanned the flames of tragedy. That is past. We face the future, and we join in hope and expectation of a firmer spirit of world tolerance and friendliness than the older years ever knew.

"It is by such deeds as yours of the Bremen that all men are linked in common understanding of humanity. Danger and the courage to face it unafraid—these are heritages of all brave people.

"The basic qualities of humanity know no racial barriers and no political bonds. By the high splendor of your achievement you have cemented the friendliness among nations without which there can be no marked advance for civilization.

OWES MUCH TO ERIN.

"The third of your party comes to us from a land to which America owes much—Ireland. Men and women of your race have sought and found here prosperity and honors. In business, public life, political place of responsibility, in the professions, in the arts, your people have long been eminent in this country.

"It has been said that there are more persons of Irish blood in Boston than in Dublin. They have been leaders in many of our activities. It gives them special pride to greet you, a gallant Irishman fired by that adventurous spirit which as ever characterized your people.

"It is our hope that when you all go back home you may carry with you cherished memories of the cordiality of this land, and that you may find symbolized in the remembrance we are now to give you an ever-living sign of New England's recognition of the worth of courage.

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is honored by the opportunity to present to you these medals in commemoration of your visit here. May they forever bind you close to us in friendly thought."

'GREAT WHITE WAYS' FOR ERIN, SAYS SMIDDY

By WALTER KANE

The Irish Free State will shortly have its own "Great White Ways" in every city and in all towns with more than 500 population, according to Timothy G. Smiddy, Free State Minister to the United States.

In an interview today while awaiting the arrival of the Bremen fliers the Irish diplomat described with pride the nearly-completed task of harnessing the Shannon river, to which the people of the Free State have subscribed $25,000,000 in the last two years and to which they will apply $15,000,000 more over the coming 12 months to finish the project.

This latest hydro-electric power, according to Smiddy, will furnish 90,000 horsepower, sufficient to cover the entire Free State with electric light and current for manufactories.

The delicate subject of prohibition was waved aside by Minister Smiddy with the assertion that Ireland is in no mood to adopt aridity.

"There has been a wave of temperance over the Free State in the last five years," he declared, "and there is a movement under way to abolish 50 per cent of the saloons. Further reduction in the number of these is predicted when the contemplated tax on liquor dealers goes into effect."

The Free State Minister is enthusiastic over the current industrial and agricultural prosperity of the people he represents.

"Compared with five years ago," he said, "the Free State is actually wealthy, and while conditions generally are not as good as might be, I see in that section of Ireland a future unsurpassed by any of its historic areas of prosperity and culture."

Minister Smiddy was slightly indisposed today in his hotel suite and kept to bed until almost the hour set for the arrival of the visiting fliers. He was able, however, to participates in all the functions planned by the city and State in their honor.

MAYOR EXTENDS 'GENUINE HUB WELCOME'

Mayor Nichols, in his speech of welcome to the Bremen fliers at Parkman Bandstand said in part:

"Boston opens her arms to Koehl, Fitzmaurice and von Huenefeld. Let us make ours the greatest welcome they have had in any American city.

"Boston knows how to pay tribute to great deeds. No community in the world has contributed more to the romance of universal history.

"Our guests have seen something of other American cities. They have told me of their astonishment at the warmth of their reception and in their modesty they perhaps do not fully grasp its meaning.

"Their flight has significance to the cause of better understanding and good will, rising in majesty and sweeping the shores of all countries.

"Boston common was well chosen as a place where brave men may be given the greetings of a great people. Here the noblest thoughts of the whole world have been written and have found apt expression in the virile American life.

"Nobility of thought and not pride of wealth have made Boston the queen among cities and America an empire among nations. In the breadth of this thought and in the spirit of citizenship in which many races and many creeds are united in love of our city, our commonwealth and our country, I extend to our honored guests a genuine Boston welcome."

MAYOR'S SON TO TELL HIS MATES OF MEETING FLIERS

Mayor Nichols' 11-year-old son Clark rode from Worcester to Boston with the fliers, shook hands with them, talked with them and as a result will probably be a hero when he goes to school in Jamaica Plain Monday morning. Of his experience he said:

"They are brave fellows and I was glad to meet them. I will tell all the fellows at school about it Monday morning. 'Fitz' piloted the Bremen and was pleasant when he talked to me."

CORYPHEES IN ORANGE GROVE NUMBER

NANCY HALLOWELL AS "ORANGE BLOSSOM"

The 1928 version of the Review of Dance, given by the Braggiotti-Denishawn dancers at the Repertory Theater, proved an artistic success. The dance ensembles ranged from the small girls, who pirouetted beneath big mushroom hats, to the symbolically elaborate Rosary number. Especially pleasing was the Orange Grove dance, participants in which are pictured above. The costumes and the stage setting were brilliant.

BOSTON FOLK IN SHIP CRASH OFF SANDY HOOK

New York, May 19 (AP)—The Red Star liner Pennland, outbound for Antwerp by way of Halifax, collided with the inbound freighter Anniston City from Baltimore during a heavy fog outside of Sandy Hook today.

The captain of the Pennland reported "considerable damage" to plates above the water line but said no one was injured. He wirelessed he would not require immediate assistance. Damage to the freighter was said to be slight.

The captain of the Anniston City later reported the freighter's stem was badly twisted and the craft was taking water rapidly. He said, however, immediate assistance was not required.

The Pennland was struck amidship on her port side. She will return to her pier when the fog lifts.

The liner left with 141 cabin and 66 tourist third-class passengers. Among passengers were: Professor Henry Norris Russell, director of Princeton University Observatory; Dr. and Mrs. George A. Matteson, Dr. H. D. Stevens and Ethan W. Hitchcock, all of Boston; Mrs. John McGowan, Miss Anne McGowan, Hugh Reilly and Miss Elizabeth Reilly of Washington; Mrs. Lynden Evans of Chicago; Miss Emily Chase, Frank Baldwin and Miss Mabel J. Winsworth, of Cleveland; M. G. Conway, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ericeson and Miss Vivian Ericeson of Minneapolis.

Other passengers included Mrs. E. W. Burke and Miss Agnes Barden of Macon, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Faulkner of Washington, Ct.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tom and Miss Mary Tom, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bellows of Walpole, N. H., and the Misses Anna and Madeline Barafaldi of Somerville, Mass.

HEAD SAYS ONLY 6 ARE 'YELLOW' IN D. A. R. RANKS

New York, May 19 (AP)—Those who criticized the Daughters of the American Revolution in the recent "blacklist" controversy were only seekers after "cheap publicity" in the belief of Mrs. Charles R. Banks, vice-president of the society.

"Those people were actuated by a desire for a little cheap publicity" she told members of the Manhattan chapter at their thirtieth birthday luncheon. "They thought that by opposing themselves to us they could gain prominence equal to ours, the most powerful body of patriotic women in the world.

"They were not really disloyal but discontented with life and grasping at straws, because they don't know what is worth while.

"Out of our membership of 160,000 there were only six who showed the yellow streak and they cannot do us any harm. We are going to show them that in a little while. Meantime their attacks have resulted in people who hitherto classed us as 'pink tea fighters' coming to our defense. Much of the criticism comes from those who are not eligible to join us, and for that reason."

Death Takes Bessie Van Vorst, Writer and Ex-Lynn Girl

Paris, May 19 (AP)—Bessie van Vorst, American writer and widow of the French senator, editor and explorer, Hugues Le Roux, died here at 54.

She was a daughter of John McGinnis, New York banker, and her first husband was John van Voorst of New York. With his sister, Marie van Vorst, she worked in cotton mills and shoe factories in Columbia, S. C., and Lynn, Mass.

From knowledge they acquired at first hand they published in 1903 "The Woman Who Toils," for which Theodore Roosevelt wrote the introduction.

Mrs. van Vorst's books included "Bagsby's Daughter," "Letters to Women in Love" and "The Cry of the Children."

PLAN EVENTS TO HONOR HEARST MEDALISTS

Presentation of the massive silver shields, won by the rifle teams of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and New Bedford high school in the William Randolph Hearst R. O. T. C. rifle trophy matches, will be made next Monday to the victorious Tech team ,and on the following Monday, May 28, to the New Bedford team.

The victory of the two Massachusetts educational institutions in the Eastern championship series, announcement of which was made by Col. George McD. Weeks, U. S. A., is hailed with jubilation throughout the State. Nearly 400 teams from 237 educational establishments competed in the trophy matches, which were under supervision of the War Department.

Maj.-Gen. Preston Brown of the First Corps Area will attend the presentation of the inscribed shield to the Tech victors at Monday's exercises, to be held at 4:15 p. m. on the Tech parade ground, in the presence of the faculty and student body. In addition to the inscribed silver trophy, medals will also be presented to the individual members of the rifle team. They are Arthur Elliott, Robert Harbock, Richard Orleman, Robert Loomis and Fred Twardgowski.

New Bedford's winning team will receive its trophy at special exercises on the high school campus, beginning at 1:30 p. m. Officiating at the presentation will be C. Walter Williams, principal of the New Bedford high school, and Col. H. T. Wilbur, commanding the school corps.

The New Bedford team men are: Ralph Metcalf, William Macy, Leon Cziezpial, Eusel Choquette and Charles Wellington.

MEXICAN REBELS SACK TOWN; KILL MAYOR, WIFE

Mexico City May 19 (INS)—Thirty rebels sacked the town of Santa Marie Del Arriba, State of Jalisco, killing the mayor and his wife, when the ammunition of the troops of the defending garrison gave out, reports from Guadalajara stated today. The guerillas set fire to many houses and fled, taking with them much loot. Federal troops have been dispatched to trail the rebels.

NOBILE PLANS 2 EXTRA FLIGHTS NEAR POLE

King's Bay, Spitzbergen, May 19 (AP)—Gen. Umberto Nobile was going ahead with plans today for a flight to the vicinity of the North Pole in about four days. The dirigible Italia, in her hangar after a flight of 2375 miles to the vicinity of Lenin Land and return, was being thoroughly overhauled.

Besides the flight to the North Pole, another to North Greenland and the MacKenzie river is in prospect.

The scientists on the Italia were prevented from observing if any new land lay beneath them during the flight because of fog.

Some birds were seen in the vicinity of Lenin Land, but the fog cut off any sight of the land itself.

On the return flight the east coast of the Spitzbergen archipelago was mapped, although land ice and sea ice joining it made the determination of the coastline difficult. The crew took 200 photographs, made 100 topographical observations and exposed more than 500 meters of motion picture film during the journey.

Amundsen "Amazed" That Nobile Sighted No Land

Oslo, Norway, May 19 (AP)—The announcement that Gen. Umberto Nobile in his flight in the Italia failed to sight Lenin Land was described by Roald Amundsen in an interview today as "astonishing."

The explorer said he had personally visited Lenin Land on an expedition with the Maud and made his way to this island group with sledges and had his signal posts erected. The Italian airship must have passed the islands in the fog, he declared.

Judging by the route the Italia took, he added, she did not appear to have flown over a very considerable area which had not been explored already.

Liner From New York Ashore

Half of "Big Bill's" Ashes to Be Buried Near Rioters

Moscow, May 19 (AP)—The body of William D. (Big Bill) Haywood will be cremated tonight to carry out the terms of his will by which half of his ashes are to be sent to Chicago.

He directed that they were to be buried near the graves of the radicals executed for participation in the Haymarket riot of 1886. The other half will be buried in Moscow with the remains of the Hungarian Communist, Landler.

The urn will remain in Moscow until the convening of the Communist International congress.

Bouts to Be Held in Ballroom of Copley-Plaza, Monday, May 28; Proceeds Will Go Toward Swelling the Fund for the Olympic Athletes' Trip Overseas

FISTICUFFS IN THE GRAND MANNER! MESDAMES AND MESSIEURS GLADSOMELY arrayed attending "Le Boxe" for their own amusement's sake as well as for the inevitable "in aid of." The boxing ring, the squared circle and Queensberry rules amid the aesthetic surroundings of the Copley-Plaza's delicately pearl and gold ballroom. Thus does the Upper Crust borrow a Gotham idea and elaborate upon it. Invitations to this one and that one socially prominent for "A Boxing Show" on Monday, May 28, have gone out under Miss Louise Fessenden's name.

THE EXCHEQUER OF THE AMERICAN Olympic committee must be enriched, else no American athletes emblazoned with the Red, White and Blue shield may compete at Amsterdam next summer. Such a state of things is not to be tolerated, of course. Hence the boxing bout with all the la de dah trimmings pertaining to a social occasion: scented ladies in regal raiment; gentlemen agleam in immaculate white and black; the patter of applause in place of hoarse shouting. It will be a merry finale to the town season that lingers on even into late May.

EXACTLY THE NAMES ARE ON THE patron and patroness list for the boxing one would expect to see there. Smart young people like the Frederic Churches and the George Richmond Fearings, 3d, who are keen to savor the social sauce with something far from routine flavor; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons King, the Samuel Feltons, 3d; Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Huntington R. Hardwick, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hornblower, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowles, the Richard Lawrences and the Ronald Lymans, Miss Louise Fessenden and William A. Otis are distinctly the sort to sponsor so unusual an entertainment.

IN ITS ENTIRETY, THE LIST IS VERY interesting, and continues with the names of Mr. and Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. Westmore A. Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell. And where could more characteristic sponsorship be found? Bouts are to be amateur as well as professional, possibly to include a wrestling match or two, and through the courtesy of the Boston Arena management the regulation prize ring and its raised platform will be set up on the shining expanse of the ballroom floor. Surely Miss Louise Fessenden and her confreres are providing a spectacle Boston in all its years has never yet witnessed.

SMILES WITHOUT NUMBER WREATHE the genial countenance of B. Nason Hamlin. And well they may, since it is Mr. Hamlin's task to dispose of the boxes for the two days of racing at the Country Club. And at this day and date, nearly a month before the flag drops and the horses are off, practically every last one of the boxes is sold or engaged. Privileged ones who were boxholders one year and two years ago at the "races" are snapping up their former places with alacrity. So Mr. Hamlin's task is no task at all, and the smiles come easily.

EVEN IF SATURDAY'S WEATHER IS NOT the sort adapted to horse shows, all is not gloom in the Jacobs Hill Hunt Set, since the Hunt Ball of last evening preceding today's horse show went on under cover and was as jolly as everyone anticipated it would be. Gentlemen in the "pink" and ladies beautifully adorned danced through the late hours, after having dined sumptuously in the early hours, all at the smart Agawam Hunt Club, just adjacent to Jacobs Hill, and just outside of Providence.

BENJAMIN F. COOK, JACOBS HILL M. F. H., and his hunt associates stage a good horse show. Boston horsemen and horsewomen are very well represented in the entries by some of the Bird string, some of the Liggett timber toppers, a high-stepper or two from the Bancroft stables, and some of the mounts so expertly ridden by small Miss Anna Danforth. If Old Sol is kind and sends down shining rays on Jacobs Hill today, the show will be a pretty sight.

BETWEEN POLO AT DEDHAM AND POLO at Westwood there'll be a sufficiency of this spirited sport to satisfy the most ardent fan. Today week a round robin is on at Gay Farm in Westwood, and has its final contest played out at Dedham Country and Polo Club, for the bankers and brokers' field day on Monday week. Five teams, no less, are in the field. Two of college men, two wearing the Dedham colors and one rallying about the standard of William Cameron Forbes and called the "Gay Farm" team.

PROBABLY FOR THE VERY LAST TIME this season have cedar trees and floral effects graced the Hotel Somerset ballroom in honor of a debutante. A ballroom done in the Louis XV manner needs almost nothing by way of added adornment, so very wisely did Mrs. John Reed Post decide on floral simplicity for the debut of her daughter, Madeleine. Of course, the bouquets and flower baskets showered on the bud were massed behind the receiving line, and added brightness to that furnished by gladioli in enormous urns.

MRS. POST'S GOWN OF BLACK, WORN with pearls and flashing diamonds, was as regally effective as that matron can always be. The two daughters, Miss Mary Post, who essayed the social swirl two or three years ago, and Miss Madeleine Post, this year's contribution to bud ranks, were frocked in period gowns quite similar as to design, but different in color, one being green and one rose. In reality Miss Madeleine Post was slated for debutante gayeties winter ago, but family bereavement postponed the event. She and her parents and sister have just come back from some months in Europe.

MORE OFFICERS MAY QUIT YD DIVISION

The Yankee Division may lose more officers who served with the unit in France, following the resignation of Col. John D. Murphy, chief of staff of the 26th.

It is feared that other resignations, many of them from men who were in the division when it was created in 1917, will follow that of Col. Murphy.

While Col. Murphy has made no statement anent his unexpected resignation it is an open secret through the ranks of the division that his action comes as a protest against the promotion of Commisisoner of Public Safety Alfred F. Foote to the office of major-general and head of the Yankee Division.

There had been a fight for promotion to this honor within the ranks of the 26th even before Maj.-Gen. Edward L. Logan retired on April 1. But this rivalry was wholly friendly. Two men were named by the soldiers for the post, both of excellent war record and active in the National Guard work.

Had either of these men been named the supporters of the other would have accepted the choice without a murmur, and all would have been harmonious in the ranks, Y. D. men assert, but Governor Fuller named Foote, who had not even been suggested for the place.

Col. Murphy organized the old Machine Gun Company of the 9th Massachusetts when the regiment went to the Mexican border.

PROMOTED IN FRANCE

In France he was at the head of this unit, and its work won so much commendation from regular army officers that Col. Murphy was given command of the 102nd Machine Gun Battalion.

He was decorated three times for valor and efficiency, receiving the Croix De Guerre, the Distinguished Service Cross and the Medal of Honor.

It was he who saw the possibilities in Capt. "Dave" Brickley, former city councillor. Col. Murphy transferred Brickley from the medical corps into the machine gun unit as a private, and Dave quickly became sergeant and top sergeant, finally attaining command of the company when Col. Murphy was called to head the 102nd Machine Gun Battalion.

NORTH CHINA'S LEADER DEFIES JAP WARNING

Peking, May 19 (AP)—Refusal of Chang Tso-Lin, northern dictator, to heed a Japanese warning intended to prevent Chinese civil warfare from spreading to Manchuria, intensified the situation today.

Chang was advised by the Japanese to retire to Manchuria, because if beaten by the Southerners (Nationalists) he would not be permitted to seek refuge there, since Japan would tolerate no fighting in that province.

Chang made plans instead to drive back the Southerners while Japan proceeded to increase the strength of the Japanees garrison at the seacoast end of the great wall, blocking any possibility of Chang's retreating through there.

This was regarded as the most momentous development in the Far East since the great war because of suggestions that Japan was planning to establish a protectorate over Manchuria, in which the Japanese have a large amount of capital invested.

Admiral Mark L. Bristol, commander of the American naval forces in Asiatic waters, was speeding aboard a destroyer from Japan to Tientsin today with a Nationalist advance threatening. At Tientsin, where American Marines predominate, and at Peking the Powers were moving to protect their nationals.

GENERAL MOTORS CROWD GOING INTO AIRPLANES

New York, May 19 (AP)—The New York American today says a huge corporation for the manufacture of airplanes has been formed with the reported backing of the three largest shareholders of the General Motors Corporation. It is to be known as the General Aircraft Corporation and plans call for factories in Baltimore, Chicago, Los Angeles and a southern city yet to be selected. One factory is in operation at Buffalo. Bernt Balchen, Clarence Chamberlin, Bert Acosta and other famous fliers will be on the rolls of the new company.

"Kisses Too Fervid," So Actor Corrigan Loses $100,000

Los Angeles, May 19 (AP)—The hopes of Emmett Corrigan, veteran of the stage, of collecting $100,000 from Mrs. Lillian A. Macloon, in a suit alleging slander, were blighted today after a Superior Court jury decided in favor of the defendant, who is a director-producer known as Lillian Albertson.

Corrigan, who had been acting for 40 years, based the suit on a letter said to have been written by Mrs. Macloon to the Actors' Equity Association, describing him as a "notorious trouble maker."

The actor was cast as Capt. Flagg, the hard boiled officer in "What Price Glory." Testimony was that Corrigan some times was too realistic in his acting.

Madeline Gray said that Corrigan's conduct in scenes with her was "repulsive" and that his stage kisses were "too fervid."

This gag in "Rio Rita" ought to win a prize for the best liquor joke of the year. Walter Catlett and Bert Wheeler are about to have "a li'l drink." "Don't be afraid, it's the real stuff," whispers Wheeler assuringly, "just off the boat." "Yes," sighs Catlett tolerantly, "just scraped off."

DIMINISHING SEASON TAKES NEW LEASE OF LIFE WITH STERLING ATTRACTIONS

TWO JOLLY FRIARS, both probably members of the Friars' Club of New York, but more nearly representing the new play, "Caponsacchi," in which Walter Hampden, (left), and Cecil Yapp will be seen at the Shubert starting Monday evening.

SMARTER DRAMA AS SEASON FALTERS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

BY casting a sympathetic eye over the current theatrical menu, you will observe at a glance the absence of bitter omen; there is no suggestion whatever of forlorn and subsiding days. Not even a wealth of May sunshine and many anonymous brands of outdoor sports seem to have checked the ambitious purveyor of indoor entertainment. The air is charged with new drama; some of it serious, bits of it gay and fluffy. Important rivalries are taking possession of two downtown temples of art, with Walter Hampden and Eva Le Gallienne—each and separately—uncorking a grist of plays designed especially for the thoughtful playgoer. In consequence of which, the stern counsellors of our theater come face to face with new specimens of art to be examined at the Hollis and the Shubert.

JUST to show how bright and shimmering is the artistic spark in regions of upper Stuart st., Mr. Clive stretches a long arm across the sea from dear old London and digs up a new play and a new dramatist for the faithful disciples of the Copley. The gesture, in a mild and modest way, appears like something of a family matter, for Norman Cannon, one of Mr. Clive's own brave toilers, is discovered as the author of "He Walked in Her Sleep." Also he is expected to play in it—for no better reason, it may be supposed, than to demonstrate a complete correlation of the arts.

Norman Cannon

ANYWAY, the patrons at the Copley will find Mr. Cannon doing double duty, nervously attending to an actor's job in a role he himself clicked off on his rusty typewriter. There were rumors of "He Walked in Her Sleep" in the early autumn of 1927, but other and, perhaps, more vexing demands laid hands upon Mr. Clive's plans. Now Mr. Cannon is to have his chance—a two-fold opening for honors. As playwright and actor, he is privileged to execute a flank movement—demand acclaim as a strutting mummer and, in contrast, hope for the best as a budding dramatist. In any event, according to report, Mr. Cannon displays both generosity and discretion; he takes a minor role.

THAT rippling, gun toting epic of midnight in New York known as "Broadway" is back again—this time at the St. James. In order to repress a too heavy burden upon the virtuous actor folk of the Keith-Albee roster, seasoned players from various "Broadway" companies have been drafted to give tone and color to the presentation. There are expectations that "Broadway," at up-town prices, will stir the imagination of playgoers and start something like an extended run. One of the best plays of the current season in the downtown drama, holding the Plymouth for weeks with its keen, irresistible appeal, there may be logic in the belief that there is life in the old girl yet.

"The Patsy"

MARION DAVIES is coming to Loew's State a week from Monday in her best comedy, "The Patsy," once a stage play.

TOUGH, BUT NOT 'HARD'

They say in Chicago that Harold Healy is a "hard customer." In the bad lands of that town he knows every crook, gun man and police reporter. He was born in Chicago and the alleys were his playground. His fists and his disposition became hard, but his heart and his manner remained soft. His is an outward appearance that makes him one of the outstanding characters in "Fast Company" at the Tremont. Mr. Healy is the boss of the ball players in the play. When he shouts: "Am I a manager or a mug?" he is to be feared. But see him in his dressing room ten minutes later and you will find a mild, soft spoken actor.

Harold Healy

"This is the first time I ever played a foreman," he laughs. "Am I as tough as I look out there?" he asks, pointing to the stage. "Anyway, it's great fun and my dad should see me."

His father is a Chicago newspaperman, identified with a chain of papers. Harold will tell you that his dad always worried that he would get into trouble, the reason for this being that the boy has arms of iron and would rather fight his way out of a difficulty than talk his way out.

Mr. Healy is a stage manager of no mean ability. For several seasons he was associated with Sam Forrest, George Cohan's director, making his work in "Rain" a notable step toward success. He was prominent in the casts of "The Bat," "Irene," "The Man Eating Tiger" and "The Six Fifty."

Looking Ahead

"Caponsacchi" on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee; "An Enemy of the People" on Thursday and Friday nights; and "Hamlet" on Saturday matinee. In Mr. Hampden's supporting company are Edith Barrett, Mabel Moore, Caroline Meade, C. Norman Hammond, Ernest Rowman, Cecil Yapp, Edwin Cushman, Stanley Howlett, W. H. Sams, Dallas Anderson and P. T. Kelly. Staged and produced by Mr. Hampden.

* * *

HOLLIS—Eva Le Gallienne and her Civic Theater Players in a repertoire of four plays. For the first week, "The Good Hope" on Monday, Wednesday matinee, Friday and Saturday nights, "Hedda Gabler" on Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Saturday matinee, and "La Locandiera" on Thursday night. "The Cradle Song" is announced for the second week on Monday, and Wednesday nights and Friday matinee. In the supporting cast are Alma Kruger, Leona Roberts, Paul Leyssac, Josephine Hutchinson, Sayre Crawley, Donald Cameron, Egon Brecher, Beatrice de Neergard and Margaret Love. Staged and produced by Miss Le Gallienne.

COPLEY—"He Walked in Her Sleep," a farce with and by Norman Cannon of the Copley Players. First time on any stage. Mr. Cannon, the author, is a member of Mr. Clive's company and will play a leading part. Others in the cast are Ralph Roberts, Gaby Fay, May Ediss, Charles Courteneidge and Cecile Dixon.

* * *

ST. JAMES—(Stock) "Broadway," a drama of New York night life by Philip Dunning and George Abbott. For this engagement the St. James company draws upon the services of special players who have appeared in the metropolitan productions. In the cast are Henry Wadsworth, Walter Gilbert, Frank Charlton and Mary Hill of the stock company, and Harriet MacGibbon, Dorothy Russell, Lucille Fenton, Julian Noa, Gustave Rolland and Jack Westerman, recruited from several "Broadway" companies.

HOLT IS STARRED

Sally Blane, Paramount featured player, has been assigned the leading feminine role in "The Vanishing Pioneer," a Zane Grey western special which will be Jack Holt's first starring picture under his new contract with Paramount.

BEERY-HATTON FILM

The newest Wallace Beery-Raymond Hatton co-starring comedy will be titled "The Big Killing," according to the latest announcement. It was produced under the working title of "Ready, Aim, Fire." The director is F. Richard Jones and the cast includes Mary Brian, Lane Chandler and Gardner James.

CHIC, COY AND SAUCY

MLLE. BORDONI fairly staggers under the weight of Parisian sartorial elegance in "Paris" at the Wilbur. Incidentally, to everybody's delight, she turns in a few snappy vocal numbers.

Circus Girl

VERNE LE HAUSER, European equestrienne, stars in the Sells-Floto Circus at Andrew Sq., beginning May 28.

LEARNS HIS "HOOFING"

Henry Wadsworth, whose work with the Keith-Albee players was of such high order that he was given the role of Roy Lane, the "hoofer" in "Broadway" at the St. James, has had a busy week.

He had never learned to "hoof," as the actors speak of dancing. But when he was assigned to play the role of Roy Lane, he at once started to learn the "hoofing" required by the play.

Henry Wadsworth

The lines themselves are of the greatest importance, but the business of dancing on and off the stage during the production, was not easy.

Julian Noa, who played the part of "Scar" Edwards in the Boston "Broadway" company and who will play that same part at the St. James production, took Wadsworth for special training.

The two have worked morning, afternoon and evening. Whenever Wadsworth had a spare minute he and Noa began "hoofing" until Wadsworth today knows time-steps, breaks and all the rest of the steps needed in the part.

Film Futures

MAY 26—

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "Circus Rookies" at Loew's State.

FINDS STAGE ALERT IN AMERICA

"I think that, next to Russia, the American stage is the most alive today," says Eva Le Gallienne, the young actress through whose courage and imagination the Civic Repertory Theater (which will come to the the Hollis on Monday)—was founded in New York, two years ago.

"In Russia they are doing exquisite things," she continues. "The reason, I think, is that people there are not tied up in knots of self-consciousness as they are on the Continent. Art, great art, is always un-self-conscious.

"Many popular actors and actresses don't do this. They have a 'bag of tricks' up their sleeves and they seem to draw the crowd just as well as the actor who really feels, who really submerges himself in his part.

"But I believe that in every audience there is at least one person who is sensitive, who cannot be deceived by tricks, who will see through merely mechanical acting, and I always act TO that person. One of the leading actors on Broadway used, I remember, to come off the stage where he had just been convulsed with sobs, and immediately begin cracking jokes with the stage hands. I never had any respect for that actor, though he is famous as actors go. As for myself, I couldn't possibly act and not do it sincerely."

Boston Elks to Celebrate With Out-door Pageant

An extensive outdoor pageant, with all the big features which are usually furnished at such entertainments, will be offered the public at Braves Field, on Saturday evening, May 26.

The occasion will be the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the organization of the Boston Lodge of Elks, No. 10.

The committee having the celebration in charge have decided that the 50th anniversary is one to be observed in joyous festivity and have asked the general public to join with Boston lodge in an evening of unbounded fun.

WOULD HAVE ACTORS RUN THEATERS

There are few men before the American public today who have achieved prominence by a harder road of conscientious effort than Walter Hampden, who will be with us on Monday at the Shubert in three of his greatest successes, "Caponsacchi," "An Enemy of the People," and "Hamlet." His reply to the query recently, "What is wrong with the theatre?" brought this—

"The real trouble with the theatre is that the men who have artistic ideals are not in authority, just as the people who have the human ideals about America are not in the position to realize them. You cannot combine commercialism with art. Long years of hard struggle have taught me that if I want an artistic career I must not think of joining forces with a manager who is after commercial gains. Whatever my mistakes or shortcomings, I have placed myself in a position to dictate my own policy. I could not do my work under the authority of a theatrical manager who could not share my faith in the drama.

"I am not finding fault with theatrical managers. What I wish to say is that I am exclusively an artist and not a business man. The thing to do in order to elevate our stage is to put the artist in control of the theatre, then and not until then will you place the stage upon the high plane of intellectual merits."

Install Sound Amplifier at Norumbega Park

"The Voice of Norumbega," an invention which utilizes the advantages of radio, will be heard for the first time Saturday, May 26, when the Auburndale resort opens for the new season.

The new device can be heard for two miles when such volume is necessary, but can be so modulated that the sounds will come like a whisper. Music of all kinds, speeches, radio broadcasts and announcements will be sent to the far corners of the park by means of the new arrangement.

AH! GLAD TIDINGS?

WELL, MARY," sighs Gilbert Roland, "I'm going away." "Oh, Gil, for good? "Yes, gal, for good." "You don't mean for good!" "Yes," says he, "for good." And says she, "GOOD!" ("Drums of Love," State.)

WHY TAKE A CHANCE?

Accidents Will Happen

Arthur Margetson at the Wilbur tells Irene Bordoni another whopper. Arthur: "I once called upon a chap and found him completely unclothed except for a tall hat. 'Why no clothes?' said I. 'No one ever calls,' said he. 'Why the hat?' asked I. 'Oh,' said he, 'someone might call.'"

STAGE AND SCREEN

Taking the Acid Test

Believe it or not, but an elderly man is reported to have appeared at the Shubert box office, asking for two seats in the back row for "Caponsacchi." "They must be in the very back row," he insisted, "because," he explained, "my wife wants to try out her new ear trumpet."

STRANGE BEDFELLOWS are Chester Conklin and W. C. Fields in their new film comedy, "Fools for Luck," which is now tickling 'em at the Metropolitan.

FIELDS TAKES PALM WITH MOVIE MEN

By LEO GAFFNEY

THE funniest man in the movies, if you ask the studio workers, is W. C. Fields. They will grant you the eminence of the great Chaplin, but the one that most amuses them is Bill Fields, as they call him. When Mr. Fields is making a picture, carpenters, electricians, directors, magnates and the "yes men" all gather around to enjoy what is to them the most ludicrous antics in the capering caricatures. Solemn directors, flanked by their flunkies, lose dignity and bridgework in uncontrollable mirth while Bill Fields is merely rehearsing.

* * *

IT was D. W. Griffith, the films' greatest genius, who discovered W. C. Fields as a screen comic. At the time, Fields had risen to the dignity of being a Ziegfeld folly. Mr. Griffith saw one of his performances and hastened to lead him to a camera. Like many other Griffith achievements, the first Fields pictures were not exactly madly acclaimed—except by the critics. Audiences have been slow to warm up to Bill Fields, but the same audiences are even slower to recognize many other Griffith enterprises.

W. C. Fields

MR. FIELDS' newest picture, "Fools for Luck," at the Metropolitan, is an hilarious, gag-free comedy in which he is the perfect bunco-steerer paired with the equally faultless fall guy, Chester Conklin. During the course of events the inimitable comics engage in a sensational pool game and, still in bitter conflict, scramble for the possession of a most peculiar oil well—all on a summer's day.

* * *

THERE is no slapsticking in "Fools For Luck." The two stars are more subtle. Each has a character to sustain and each plays it to the life. As the fake stock promoter, Fields is as false as a ready-wrought four-in-hand. He is an outrageous bluff, getting by in the bland manner of the famous Jed Peters of the O. Henry stories. And as his chief victim, Conklin is the acme of dismayed bewilderment, a most inferior little fellow forever overawed by the Go-Getter and the Well Dressed. Among all the screen's comics, only Chaplin can be funnier by his characterizations. If you see "Fools For Luck," look sharply for the things Mr. Griffith and the studio workers already know, and if you can find them your pleasure will be as keen as theirs.

THIS merry month of May marks the 20th anniversary of D. W. Griffith as a producer of motion pictures. Last week in Los Angeles the "trade" foregathered to pay tribute to "the old master." The principal speaker was Cecil B. De Mille, also a pioneer in the films, who said: "Sculpture has its Rodin, music its Beethoven, the art of painting its Rembrandt, and the motion picture art, the greatest in point of popularity and appreciation, has its Griffith." He went on to say that the films owe more to Griffith than to any other individual or set of individuals ever associated with the craft. The tribute occurred after the premiere showing of Griffith's latest picture, "The Drums of Love," which comes to Loew's State on Monday.

RHYMES BY WHOLESALE

Lew Brown, the "gag man" of the combination of G. B. DeSylva, Ray Henderson and Lew Brown, who composed the score and lyrics for "Good News," now at the Majestic, was born in New Haven.

His parents moved to New York city later, where Lew went to the De Witt Clinton high school where he excelled in every subject but had, however, the aptitude for verse which for a time decorated all of the school publications.

It was after a summer session as a life guard in the Rockaways that Brown decided to be a song writer and he always attributed this ambition to the fact that he held a lot of hands that summer during his life saving operations. Anyway, such rhymes came easy to him and he was still in his teens when he walked into Al von Tilzer's office one day with a pocket full of them.

He got a job and the first song he ever wrote was sung by the well-known Belle Baker. It was called "Please Don't Take My Loving Man Away."

Then in rapid succession came a torrent of popular songs. Among them were the famous "Yes, We Have No Bananas," "Last Night on the Back Porch," "Collegiate," "Don't Bring Lulu," "Dapper Dan," "Why Did I Kiss That Girl," "I Want to Go Where You Go," "I'd Climb the Highest Mountain," and many others. With DeSylva and Ray Henderson he wrote "It All Depends on You," "Magnolia," "So Blue," "South Wind," "Here I Am Broken Hearted" and "Just a Memory."

ESTHER IS EVANGELIST

Luther Reed will direct Esther Ralston in her next picture, titled "The Sawdust Paradise." The picture tells the story of a girl evangelist.

The only American joined-together-at-birth "Siamese" twins will appear at the Bowdoin Square Theater for one week beginning May 28. They are Margaret and Mary Gibb, who were born in Holyoke, Mass.

Mrs. Gibb, their mother, who is the only mother ever to have survived the birth of joined-together twins, travels with her daughters.

The pair are radically different and these differences are clearly shown in the sketch which they will present. They do not merely exhibit themselves, but present a musical melange of singing and dancing. The twins will dance with members of the audience.

Lon Chaney Becomes Actor Via Property Man Route

However beetle-browed and stern-looking he may be, Lon Chaney, star of "The Big City" at the Orpheum is in reality a gentle and gentlemanly person who hails from Colorado Springs.

To those who ask him what impelled him to the screen, he explains that it was "just a natural hankering to be an actor."

One of his pet stories is relating how, at an early age, he made his first appearance with his brother in a play of their own invention. That "taste" led to a brief theatrical venture. He acted as property man and sometimes as wardrobe man with odd, traveling shows.

APLIN HAS ITLE FOR NEW FILM

LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Picture Editor of Universal Service.

Angeles, May 19—You would suspect a small thing like a ould keep half of Hollywood guessing. Charlie Chaplin just couldn't find a name that conveyed the idea of his next comedy and he had all his friends offering suggestions. Joseph Schenk came through with one. Sam Goldwyn offered something else, and even Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks offered to christen the unnamed child before they sailed for Europe. But all offers were rejected.

Charles Chaplin

Charlie has his own ideas. Out of a clear sky the name came to him and he was as much overjoyed as if an unknown relative had suddenly died and left him a fortune. He is calling his next comedy "City Lights." It is a story by Chaplin it is promised to the fans for ember.

t don't set your hearts on get it before Christmas. Charlie s his time and he doesn't begin al work until the last of this th. Right now he is making s and assembling his cast. He ys discovers some new face and yone will be waiting to see who a break this time. The story rently deals with the troubles of our hero in the big city.

Al Jolson has looked them all over Hollywood. That's a star's privilege isn't it, when he is trying to [illegible] leading lady for his picture? He had his heart set on a blonde, and now hold your breath until I relate what blonde he chose. After a series of tests that resembled a photograph gallery, Jack Warner and Jolson both decided upon Josephine Dunn for the part. You'll admit Josephine's stock has soared high since she was picked out to play in "Excess Baggage." She has been borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who have her under contract for one of the leading roles in "The Singing Fool." Betty Bronson has the other. I wonder if I mentioned that Lloyd Bacon, a son of that grand old man, Frank Bacon, will direct.

P. A. Powers, an Irishman whose business sagacity is a byword in the film industry, has at last been persuaded to free Eric von Stroheim so that he can direct Gloria Swanson in "The Swamp." A good story would be that Gloria had vamped P. A. and succeeded in getting the director for whom she has been angling these many months. But that wouldn't be true, for it was Von Stroheim's promise to take some additional scenes and make two pictures out of the original "Wedding March" that turned the trick. Clever boy, this Von Stroheim, to make two films where one originally grew. Let's hope he will never again be called "Filmland's Greatest Luxury," for he is too fine a director to be handicapped with such a reputation.

You may absolutely count any day utterly wasted in Hollywood when you can't pick up a few pieces of news over the luncheon table. Wall street brokers tarry over their midday meal to pick up stock tips. We do the same to pick up news tips. Nothing very exciting happened yesterday. Richard Rowland and his bride received a few close friends at Dick's house. They came home from their Honolulu honeymoon. Lina Basquette wandered into the Montmartre with her hair worn in curls all a part of her makeup in "Celebrity." She paused at my table to tell me that she is to make a picture later in the year with Eddie Quillan. George Jessell's wife left yesterday and his mother arrives today. No family trouble, you understand. Mrs. Jessell was just being kind to her husband and invited her mother-in-law to look after him. Georgie and his mamma leave for Arrowhead to vacation. When he returns he will make "George Washington, Jr." Pretty little Dorothy Rivier is the feminine appeal in "Beware of Blondes," Columbia special. That is the play in which Matt Moore and Roy D'Arcy appear.

Samuel Goldwyn's latest gift to Hollywood, Lili Damiti, arrives in town today. I am wondering what line of talk she will give the reporters. She certainly did nobly when she said American men lacked understanding, but I am just the mean, suspicious kind of person that suspects that Sam wired her what to say. I have always said it, and I say it even when Sam and I have our yearly battle, that any time he stops making pictures he'd make the world's greatest publicity agent. And I don't mean maybe.

Snapshots of Hollywood gathered at Random. Dick Barthelmess and his bride driving through Beverly Hills. Estelle Taylor in a brown straw hat and brown costume dining at The Russian Eagle. Louise Brooks, bareheaded, eating at the same restaurant. Dorothy Mackaill again gracing the bachelor table at the Montmarte, the sole feminine adornment. Mrs. Arthur Hornblow looking very chic in a green sport suit and sweater. Eddie Brandstater, host of Montmartre, back at his usual table after a serious accident. Marion Davies in a bell hop's costume acting a comedy scene. Three actors cooking flapjacks on Sunset boulevard. All a part of a movie. That's all today.

BRINGS HOSPITAL JOY

TODAY

training methods," Ford called Junkers.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon, Ford was talking with Gen. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad. Perhaps they discussed the combination sleeping car and airplane transcontinental service, announced by the Pennsylvania and Santa Fe.

Just beyond Ford's Dearborn office, Gen. Atterbury might have seen actual air transportation on the Ford flying field.

A neat, new station has been built for arriving and departing air passengers, and a big Ford plane, having just brought a full load from Cleveland, was waiting to carry another load in the other direction.

If you ask Ford about his flying plans, he says, "Ask Edsel, he is looking after that."

But Ford is deeply interested in flying, and sells his tri-motor planes for about $30,000 less than each one costs to build. Profits with volume will come later.

Ford says that for the moment, "flying has come up against a stone wall, and some big things need to be done." He may undertake to do one or two of them, although he does not say so.

All Detroit cheered the Bremen fliers today, and nobody except Ford paid much attention to Junkers, who built the Bremen and made the flight possible.

Asked if that did not seem unjust, Ford replied, "Well, somebody asked the other day, 'Did you ever hear of anybody that knew the name of Paul Revere's horse?'"

The automobile industry is booming, as never before. Chrysler expects to make the world sit up with his new car, the "De-Soto." Florida will like that name.

General Motors, in July will produce a new Buick, for which you are politely requested to wait. Mr. Knudsen, president of General Motors' Chevrolet, says that car is selling one hundred and thirty-two thousand cars a month.

The young Ford factory driver, showing you through traffic in a new Ford model A, shows you that the car can do forty miles an hour in second speed, and believing that three negatives make an effective affirmative, says:

"In the beginning everybody tried to get away faster than this car, to show it up. But they don't never nobody try to do that now. They just give you the road." Saying which, he risked your life, once more, scooting between two heavy trucks.

Carry a cheerful thought to Sunday morning. This country is really rich, plenty of opportunity to make up for anything that may have happened to you in Wall Street in the last day or two.

Stocks listed on the big exchange were worth, at yesterday's market price, read carefully the pleasant figures, $54,818,925,860.

And that does not include stocks listed on the curb exchange, or not listed anywhere, or the gigantic wealth outside of corporations.

Brokers loans, not quite five billions, are less than 9 per cent of the big exchange stock values. How foolish to make a fuss about those loans.

But don't gamble.

FILM COMEDY CHEERS WAR VETERANS

Several hundred disabled ex-service men at the Veterans' Hospital in West Roxbury had the time of their lives at the Boston Evening American-Metropolitan Theater movie party.

The picture was a W. C. Fields-Chester Conklin comedy, a favorite team with the boys at the institution, "Fools For Luck," chronicling the adventures of an oil well promoter in a small town, which made its premier at the Metropolitan, was, as far as the invalids were concerned, the most uproarious of all pictures they have seen since the American and Metropolitan instituted this joint entertainment.

This marked the final hospital showing of the comedy. On the two previous nights it was shown respectively to the bluejackets at the Chelsea Naval Hospital, and at the Boston Sanatorium, where patients are confined with various tubercular ailments.

Another series of hospital entertainments will be given early in the summer. The plan has been hailed with wide spread satisfaction among medical men, and in every case it has been noted that the patients have been markedly benefitted.

Romping Comedy for Two Favorites at Olympias

A happy laugh combination will be provided at the Washington St. and Scollay Sq. Olympias next week when Charlie Murray and Louise Fazenda appear in First National's new special comedy, "Vamping Venus."

Louise Fazenda

It is the first time these popular fun makers have teamed up and the result is said to be a series of the funniest situations of the season. "Vamping Venus" is the story of a New York politician and his nagging wife. The political leader is knocked out by a jealous rival and takes a trip to Dreamland, imagining he is in ancient Greece, where he soon becomes political dictator.

The possibilities for Murray and Miss Fazenda in this story are easily seen.

"FIFTY-FIFTY GIRL"

Billy Freney is to take the place originally assigned to Johnnie Morris in Bebe Daniels' new Paramount picture, "The Fifty-Fifty Girl." Clarence Badger now is directing the production.

FAN MAIL IN LOADS FOR BORDONI

So much is continually being written about the fan mail received by the movie stars that the public could almost be led to believe that such honors, if they can rightly be called honors, escape the stars of the legitimate stage. Such an impression is entirely wrong, as evidenced by the mail of Irene Bordoni, who is now playing at the Wilbur in "Paris."

Mail is delivered in such quantities to Miss Bordoni that she is obliged to devote part of her Sundays in taking care of it, as she reads every line of it and, if the letter merits an answer, it gets it.

"I have discovered more relatives than I ever knew I had since I have been in America," Miss Bordoni confides. "Hardly a week passes but I receive a letter from someone who pretends to be my uncle, my cousin, my aunt or my niece who would like to be helped out of a financial difficulty. And some of the interesting news they tell me about my birthplace and my girlhood is most amusing. I find that I have been born and lived in most every place in the world.

"Only a few days ago I received a letter from a so-called admirer who knew my father in San Francisco—in fact remembered when I was born out there. That is the first time I have ever been accused of being born in San Francisco. While I love the town, I was not born there nor in any other place but in Ajaccio in Corsica."

Walter Hiers, Film Comic, Appears at New Boston

Walter Hiers, who calls himself "A Large Party from Hollywood," appears on the stage of the Keith-Albee Boston beginning Monday. As a matter of fact, Mr. Hiers IS large and has been one of the screen's comedy favorites as a result. He is a genial fat man and will be remembered from a hundred and more photoplays. Perhaps it is true that nobody loves a fat man but one thing is certain, everyone loves a fat man's fun.

Walter Hiers

There are approximately 250 pounds of Mr. Hiers. In vaudeville Mr. Hiers presents a monologue of personal reminiscences. He tells tales out of school and many of his personal experiences on the "lots" of Hollywood.

GARY COOPER CHOSEN

Gary Cooper will be leading man opposite Esther Ralston in her next picture, thus receiving the assignment at first given to Richard Arlen. Other actors in the cast include William J. Worthington, Mary Doran and Freeman Wood.

PLAY "GRASSHOPPER," SAYS GOODWIN

BETTER TO HOP OUT OF WAY

FRANK A. GOODWIN
Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Who is at fault for all of these accidents?

Who owns the streets, anyway?

Well—from my experience, it all depends on the viewpoint.

Frank A. Goodwin

I received a letter some time ago from a motorist who said that pedestrians ought to be compelled to get a license and before getting it, ought to be forced to pass an examination in running, jumping, dodging and extricating themselves from wheels and machinery.

And then on Thursday, I got a letter from Gertrude S. Cole of 53 State st., making interesting suggestions from the pedestrian's point of view. She writes in part:

"In a letter in one of the Boston papers last night a motorist complained bitterly of pedestrians and of the nervous strain put upon the poor driver by the carelessness of pedestrians.

SUGGESTS EMBLEM

"It does seem a shame doesn't it, that a man or woman who drives what may be an instrument of death, weighing hundreds of pounds, should be obliged to drive with such great care that he or she may stop quickly because pedestrians have the mistaken idea that they have some rights on the highway.

"I enjoyed very much the controversy over the codfish some time

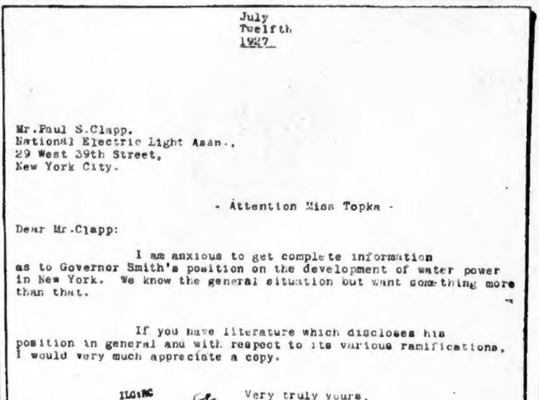
Power Lobby Anxious Over Smith



July

Mr.Paul S.Clapp.

New York City.

- Attention Miss Topka -

Dear Mr.Clapp:

I am anxious to get complete information as to Governor Smith's position on the development of water power in New York. We know the general situation but want something more than that.

If you have literature which discloses his position in general and with respect to its various ramifications, I would very much appreciate a copy.

Very truly yours,

Ira L.Grimshaw.

IN THE MATTER OF JR 83
DATE Apr 26 1928 WITNESS
R.S. REPORTER.

This letter shows how the national power lobby keeps track of candidates for President. It was written by Ira L. Grimshaw, assistant managing director of the joint committee of National Utility Associations, which started business on June 30, 1927, with $400,000 admittedly contributed for the purpose of defeating the Walsh resolution, beating Boulder Dam and fighting the idea of public ownership of the public utilities of the country.

This letter was written 42 days after the committee had been formed, addressed to Paul Clapp, managing director of the parent propaganda organization of the electric power interests, the National Electric Light Association. It is now on official record before the Federal Trade Commission.

FOLEY PROBING HUB'S GAMING MACHINES

Investigation of alleged graft in connection with slot gambling machines in Boston turned District Attorney William J. Foley's investigation of liquor, vice and extortion on still another new angle today.

Reports that former agents for an uplift society accepted money to permit the placing o. these machines in local stores, when ostensibly they were trying to eliminate them from the city, are under investigation.

In the same connection the authorities have well-substantiated information that one former agent, after retiring from the society's employ, went into the business himself.

In order to run down these reports, investigators are seeking a man who formerly conducted a business of placing these machines in this vicinity. He was acquitted in the courts but during his trial divulged considerable information which the authorities now wish to check up.

This individual is said to have exhibited a check indorsed by a then agent for the uplift society, showing the payment of money to the agent.

If money was paid to anybody for protection in placing the slot machines, the district attorney wants to know it, and every effort will be made to locate the man who holds the key to this angle of the probe.

With Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, the district attorney today also continued questioning of property owners, on whose premises it is alleged questionable houses were operated. All are being asked for every shred of information they have in regard to their tenants. Two women, who, it is said, were inmates of one of these houses, were also interrogated.

You Live Better Than King of Old, Davis Says

Andover, Mass., May 10 (INS)—Mr. Average Man in the United States today lives better than did most kings 300 years ago, said James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, in an address today at Phillips Academy.

Secretary Davis said the American worker has become "one of the weightiest factors of our economic life."

Compared to the kings of three centuries back, Secretary Davis said the working man today has a greater variety of food on his table. His house is more sanitary. It is better lighted and heated.

"We have discovered, or are discovering," he continued, "that the secret of prosperity is found not in low wages, but in the highest wages that it is possible to pay, for the worker who is thus paid becomes one of the best consumers of such material goods as are produced."

RELIEF PLANES OFF TO GREENLY

The army planes will then return to St. Georges to await Melchior's arrival in the Bremen, and escort him back to New York.

Old Orchard, Me., May 19 (AP)—A truckload of gasoline was brought here today from Providence, R. I., and left at the hangar of Captain Harry Jones, the men who brought it saying it was for the Junkers plane Bremen, which had orders to stop here for refuelling on the trip from Greenly Island to New York.

COOLIDGE GIVES BOYS TIP ON WAY TO LIVE

With Weymouth Post, American Legion Band, playing martial airs, the President and his wife were greeted by Headmaster Alfred E. Stearns, Thomas Cochran, Alfred L. Ripley, James C. Sawyer and Judge Elias B. Bishop, all of the Andover board of trustees.

Others on hand were Secretary of Labor Davis, William Phillips, Minister to Canada; Governor and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Chief Justice Rugg of the State Supreme Court, Governor Huntley N. Spaulding of New Hampshire and others.

Among those here was William Lanier Washington of Westport, Ct., hereditary representative of the Washington family. Also there were many college presidents.

President and Mrs. Coolidge departed at 1 p. m. for Northampton to visit Mrs. Coolidge's mother, who has been ill. A crowd saw her off.

The President's address was broadcast.

HIGHER STANDARDS

The academy, or secondary school, was hailed by President Coolidge in his address as one of the greatest factors in moulding the habits and thoughts of America's future generations. Delivering the principal address at the celebration, he urged more attention to elevation of the standards of such institutions.

Addressing the student body and alumni on the campus, Mr. Coolidge pointed out that the student mind is at the ideally plastic stage at the age of matriculation at a secondary school.

"It is for this reason that our secondary schools are of such great importance," he said. "When students now enter the college they are no longer of an impressionable age. Habits of thought have become fixed.

"The college cannot altogether refashion its students. About the best it can do is to carry them on in the course they have already begun. While the needs of our universities are very great and every effort should be made to meet them, it does not seem that sufficient emphasis has been placed on the needs of our secondary schools.

"After all, they furnish the material that goes into our higher institutions. Their younger and more plastic students have even greater needs than those who are more mature. They ought to come under the influence of teachers of ability, character and sympathy."

The President took occasion to direct some advice to the whole student body of the nation. He counselled them to apply to themselves in their classrooms the same standards they impose upon themselves on the baseball diamond or in other branches of sports.

"Two great tests in mental discipline are accuracy and honesty," he observed. "It is far better to master a few subjects thoroughly than to have a mass of generalizations about many subjects.

"The world will have little use for those who are right only a part of the time.

ACCURACY ESSENTIAL.

"The standards of the world are not like those set by the faculty, but more closely resemble those set by the student body themselves. They are not at all content with a musician who can strike only 90 per cent of the notes. They do not tolerate the man on the diamond who catches only 80 per cent of the balls. The standards which the student body set are high.

"They want accuracy that is well-nigh complete. They apply the same standards to candor and honesty. Bluff and pretense may be permitted in the classroom, but in their relations with each other students regard such practices with contempt and those who resort to them are properly considered to be cheap.

"They may be willing to view with considerable tolerance those who break the rules of the school, but they will not fail to mete out condemnation and penalty on those who break the rules of training.

"When the world holds its examinations it will require the same standards of accuracy and honesty which student bodies impose upon themselves. Unless the mind is brought under such training and discipline as will enable it to acquire these standards at an early period, the grave danger increases that they may never be acquired."

For the most part, President Coolidge's address was topical. He extoled the foresight and vision of Judge Samuel Phillips, Jr., who first broached the idea that assembling the youth of various parts of the country to be educated together would be a powerful influence against sectionalism.

He recalled that Phillips Academy, brought into existence at a time the cause of the revolution hung in the balance, first was conducted in an abandoned carpenter shop, but that, despite the most adverse conditions, it survived to become the pioneer among schools based on the principle of equal opportunity for all classes.

At Nashua the special train bearing President and Mrs. Coolidge was met by a crowd. Both went to the platform and bowed their acknowledgements of the cheers of thousands gathered at the Union station.

Following the departure of the President, Governor Fuller extended the congratulations and the greetings of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to Phillips Academy. He was followed by Secretary of Labor Davis, United States Minister to Canada William Phillips, Governor Spaulding of New Hampshire, President Lowell of Harvard, President Farrand of Cornell, Headmaster Lewis Perry of Phillips Exeter Academy, Master Frederic Blagden Malim of Wellington College, England, and Dr. Stearns.

A track meet in the afternoon with Phillips-Exeter will close the two-day celebration.

2 NAVY FLIERS KILLED IN FALL

Washington, May 19 (AP)—The Navy Department was advised today of the death of two naval officers in an airplane accident yesterday during the maneuvers sin Hawaiian waters.

The officers were Lieut. H. R. Ballinger, pilot, and Ensign A. C. Koble of the Naval Reserve, passenger.

The plane, attached to the battleship West Virginia, crashed into the sea after a tail spin of about 1500 feet. No trace of the plane or the men was found.

Ballinger's home was at San Pedro, Cal., but the Navy Department had no record of the home address of Koble.

SEIZE HUGE STILL IN MARLBORO RUM RAID

Marlboro, May 19 (INS)—The largest liquor raid in the history of Marlboro was revealed today when police announced they had seized two tanks containing 2500 gallons of denatured alcohol and a still 10 feet in height. The seizure was made at the farm of Herbert Morse, who said he had let his barn to persons unknown to him. A pipe from a big still was hidden in the barn cupola. An electric cable from the barn ended in the Morse home.

SHERIFF BLAKE'S BODY FOUND IN MOOSEHEAD

Rockwood, Me., May 19 (AP)—The body of Sheriff E. Blake of Plymouth, Mass., one of the ten men drowned in Moosehead last Sunday, was found early this afternoon by Harley Budden, a brother of W. S. Budden, guide, who was one of those drowned, and Henry Perley.

Radio Dialog

THE BREMEN FLIERS will be heard over two local stations on the occasion of their official reception at the Boston Arena tonight. Stations WNAC and WBET plan to broadcast the complete program. In addition, WBET hoped to be able to transmit the Boston Common exercises at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and WNAC was making efforts to have the fliers deliver personal greetings from their suite at the Ritz-Carlton as had been arranged for yesterday evening before it was known that the three would be delayed in their arrival.

Sesquicentennial

THESE are busy days for WEEI, with bustling activity in connection with the sesquicentennial ceremonies at Phillips Andover Academy. President Coolidge was the most conspicuous figure in today's imposing roster of speakers. His address, booked for 11 a. m., shortly after his arrival at Andover by special train from Washington, was the high light of the morning program. Governor Fuller, Governor Spaulding of New Hampshire, President Lowell of Harvard, and other celebrities, made up the afternoon list of speakers.

Pops Night

MAESTRO CASELLA does not pepper his Pops programs to any noticeable degree with Strauss waltzes and such like Tiergarten pieces, preferring to adhere to the accepted, though sometimes a bit hackneyed classics. Tonight's concert, broadcast through WBZ, brings Tchaikowsky not less than four times, to wit, in the Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin," "Nutcracker Suite," "Italian Caprice" and "1812 Overture." Then we have Handel's "Largo," Saint Saens' Bacchanale from Samson and Delilah," various bits by Debussy, Chabrier, and Kreisler, and a resurrected overture from the little-known "Matilde de Shabran" of Rossini.

Glorified Botany

HANDEL'S "Largo" is an interesting example of the type of music which fools listeners. It admirably refutes the general supposition that music can be descriptive. We hear it played solemnly in church as religious music, sung with passion as a love song and glorified to symphonic proportions by large orchestras, whereas it is simply a ditty sung by a tenor to a tree.

Hayden a Boston Cult

MENTION of Handel bring Hayden automatically to mind. Boston is the only spot in the English-speaking world where Hayden must be pronounced Hyden. It amounts to an obsession; to such a degree, in fact, that the thoughless utterance of "Hayden" by an outlander in the hearing of a member of Boston's revered choral society is almost sufficient excuse for an abrupt "Pistols for two and coffee for one!"

Negro Grand Opera

WGBS of New York will present a work which is claimed to be the first negro grand opera broadcast tomorrow night at 10:15. The piece is all about voodoos, plantations, jazz, spirituals, love, jealousy and what-not.

Final Cadman Talk

DR. S. PARKES CADMAN will be heard for the last time during the present season tomorrow afternoon in the broadcast of the Bedford Branch Y. M. C. A. weekly conference. He will be back in the fall to answer the questions which have accumulated over the summer.

Gold Rush

TOMORROW night's Stetson Parade from WEEI through the Red Chain will be built around the gold rush of '49. This broadcast commences at 6 p. m. Willard De Lue, Boston newspaper man, is responsible for the continuity.

Atwater Kent Singers

WILLIAM SIMMONS, baritone, and Allen McQuhae, tenor, will be featured with the Atwater Kent quartet in tomorrow night's broadcast through WEEI at 9:15. "Calm as the Night" and "Thy Beaming Eyes," sung by the baritone, ought to be well worth watching for.

SMITH HOLDS LEAD IN OREGON PRIMARY

Portland, Ore., May 19 (AP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York maintained a consistent lead in his bid for Oregon's backing at the Democratic national convention on the face of incomplete returns today from yesterday's primary.

In 533 precincts out of 1843 in the State, Smith received 5387 votes. Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana followed with 3543, although Walsh had withdrawn. His withdrawal was not received in time to remove his name from the ballot. Senator James A. Reed of Missouri was third with 1994.

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, was unopposed in the Republican presidential field and polled 32,691 in 674 precincts.

BREMEN FLIERS TO TOUR BOSTON IN CADILLACS

In order to insure the German-Irish fliers of dependable transportation, Mayor Nichols and his committee chose the Cadillac Automobile Company of Boston for this important part of the three-day celebration. The fliers were met at the Huntington ave. railroad station by a fleet of Cadillac open cars under the supervision of Sales-Manager E. G. FitzHenry, who has had a great deal of experience through his connection with the mayor's committee on "Lindbergh Day" and similar occasions.

BIG ED MORRIS DUE TO HURL FOR SOX

"I'm glad to see Boston back in there. It used to be a great city when I played with the Tigers. Every game was a sellout, and there was a great show every day. Bill is building one of those teams again, and I notice the crowds are beginning to come out. Time Boston was getting a break in baseball.

"But that won't prevent us trying to grab off this last game. We hit hard enough to win the two that we dropped, and fielders can't keep performing miracles forever, even for Carrigan."

MR. BOSTON
By Jack Conway

SERGT. EDDIE MACK of the Argonne A. A. has asked Mr. Boston to release the following open letter to Major James Fitzmaurice of the transatlantic plane Bremen:

Dear Fitz,

I regret I didn't run into you when we were overseas in the Great Adventure, but if you and your fellow fliers will drop up to Braves Field on Monday night as my guests I'll try to make you happy.

I understand that you have seen the Dempsey-Tunney and the Dundee-Levine bouts since you came to this country, and that you contend you haven't seen a good fight since you left Ireland.

Remember the action in the Argonne forest during the war, Fitz? There was not any stalling over there. It was hit and take with the Yanks and the other Allied forces winning the day. There was not any place there for the diver or the quitter.

Well, Fitz, that's the kind of a show I'm putting on at Braves Field on Monday night. There's 16 or so boys on the card and every one of them knows how to fight.

Maybe the boxers fight best at the Argonne shows because they want to live up to the best traditions of our fighting forces of the Argonne forest.

I understand you will be in Boston until Monday night. If so, drop up to Braves Field and you will admit that all the real fighting is not restricted to Ireland.

Bring Capt. Koehl and Baron von Huenefeld along with you as I know they will also appreciate seeing a little real ring action.

Yours for better fights,
SERGT. EDDIE MACK.

"I BELIEVE Fitz will not be disappointed if his program enables him to take in the Argonne show," said Mr. Boston. "The success of the Argonne A. A. fight cards have been due to the fact that there are few champions and near champions on the program.

"Eddie Mack and Johnny M[illegible] have gone out and signed up a flock of birds who have been anxious to fight and who have not picked their opponents. The result has been the boys have been paired well and when they have got into the ring they have let the punches fly.

"If the fliers are able to attend the show at Braves Field, they will be accorded special honors [illegible] from the ring by Mayor Nichols.

"The field boxes will be decorated with American flags, while a special electric light feature showing the American, German and Irish flags has been prepared. Mack has also secured a couple of tons of [illegible] and a flock of airplanes to add to the excitement of the occasion.

"Braves Field can care for 60,000 people. So he's hoping that the fliers will be able to arrange their schedule so as to take in the show. A great crowd will receive [illegible] to [illegible] them, while they themselves will be able to [illegible] a series of [illegible] fights. Maybe Fitz will once more visualize himself back in action in the World War when he sees the kind of fighting Sergt. Eddie hands out at the Battle Field of Action."

Lou Interested in N. L. Flag Fight

Dear Rog:

What a dog fight you fellows are having over in the National League. I think the fellows on our club get more kick out of the National League race than from their own. Every time we pick up a newspaper the clubs have been kicked around again, and we pay as much attention to the score board each afternoon as to our own game.

You're on the ground and things may look different to you, but to me it looks like the Cardinals and Cubs were about ready to explode some real dynamite. I like the Cardinals' lineup from top to bottom. They've got experience, they've got a lot of good defensive play, and they have good pitching. An outfit like that is hard to beat.

The Cubs are coming on pretty strong, too. I notice [illegible] they remind me of the Cleveland Indians, who are cutting a pretty wide swath in our league right now. They are making good pitching and a lot of fighting spirit cover up a lot of other weaknesses, and that's exactly what Cleveland is doing.

You know, Rog, I'm still young enough to remember the college days, and I'm still convinced that a little touch of the old college fighting spirit will get a player or a ball club a long way in the big leagues. Maybe I'm all wrong, but it seems to me that the fellow who keep their heads up and keep fighting are the fellows who get furthest in this game.

OUR league is going along about as expected. The Athletics and Yankees are making a fight of it with the Cleveland club hanging on fairly close and the others nowhere. Now that we've had a chance to look over the western clubs, I am more convinced than ever that whatever fight is made will have to come from Philadelphia. Our western division, with the exception of Cleveland, appears to be weak—and I don't think Cleveland will stay up there very long, either. They've got great pitching—but that about lets them out, and you know, Rog, one can hardly win a pennant on pitching alone.

I'm glad to say the base hits are beginning to come to me again now. I was worried for a time over my slump. But I guess I'm over the worst of it. The Babe has started socking the ball, too—which means our run-making machine will function a lot better from now on.

I see that you too are getting the [illegible] and are back up there in the first five where you belong. The older a fellow gets the longer it seems to take to get going in the spring, but I've noticed that along about June the list of leading hitters is made up pretty much of the old familiar names.

Babe says to tell you that he's turned into a left field hitter now. He hit one in the left field stands the other day that was about as long a drive as I've ever seen. He has been clocking his bat and placing the ball right regularly of late, and believe me, Rog, the big fellow hits just as hard to left as he does to right.

Yours truly,
Lou Gehrig

when Zev won the blue ribbon classic of the American turf.

Another terrific downpour hit Louisville last night followed by a second deluge today, farther [illegible] [illegible] A force of [illegible] men worked frantically all morning in an effort to get the water off the track.

[illegible] bucket and [illegible] mops with which they swabbed up the deepest puddles. After the moppers finished [illegible] drags were sent around the track, turning over the mud in the hope that the [illegible] breeze and the sun, which peeked out from the clouds occasionally, would help dry out the course.

The track which was sloppy early in the morning, had changed to muddy by noon and was giving only slight evidence of drying out by time the first race was called.

Reigh Count, the favorite, received a heavy play in the mutuels with the unofficial odds making the price 7 to 5. Women in particular were going to Reigh Count, evidently believing the [illegible] red colt was as good as [illegible].

[illegible] day found the [illegible] Downs race course a whirl of excitement with crowds streaming through every gate, giving indications of an attendance upwards of 80,000. Out-of-town visitors who had brought wardrobes for balmy summer weather lugged umbrellas and slickers in preparation for another downpour which threatened every second.

The sun peeked out from behind the low hanging clouds giving indications that they might scatter, but after shining brightly a few minutes the sun was lost again, leaving the day dull and gray.

Thousands began their march to Churchill Downs early in the day. It was the 54th time these Kentuckians had gone through the same motions and the 54th time the rest of the world had stood on tiptoes, eager for the first flash of the name of the winner of the classic of the American turf.

Nutmeg State Ring Body Suspended

New York, May 19 (AP)—The investigation by the Amateur Athletic Union which followed the fatal injury of an amateur boxer in a bout at Bridgeport, Ct., March 24 has resulted in the suspension of the Connecticut Association by the national body. The reason given was the "failure of the Connecticut A. A. U. to clean house, when charges of commercialism were made."

The investigation disclosed that amateur boxing in the Nutmeg State was "tainted with commercialism" and the national authorities immediately ordered a complete clean up. When the condition was not remedied a telegraphic vote of the board of governors was taken and the suspension was ordered as a result.

The affairs of the Connecticut association will be administered by a board of commissioners appointed by President Murray Hulbert until the annual meeting of the national body in November.

CUBS GO AFTER 13TH STRAIGHT VICTORY

Chicago, Ill., May 19—Manager Joe McCarthy will send his ace Charlie Root, against the Braves today in an effort to win their 13th straight game.

The Cubs are playing the best baseball in the National League at present, while the Braves have not been able to get started. Unless the 13 victory is a jinx, Chicago should sweep the series.

Boston tried hard to win yesterday, but "Kiki" Cuyler started his long distance batting and he picked one of Ed Brandt's fast ones in the third inning and drove it over the fence with Freddie Maguire on base. These two runs really won the game as the final score was 3 to 1.

The Braves can blame their loss to the masterful pitching of Art Nehf. Art only gave five scattered hits. Rogers Hornsby prevented the local twirler from pitching his third straight shutout victory, when he poked a home run in the right field stands in the fourth inning.

Manager Jack Slattery will use Bobby Smith on the hill today. Smith has fully recovered from his illness and he has regained his full strength. If Bobby's fast ball is working well, he may put a finish to the Cub's winning streak.

Navy Picked to Win "Tri" Regatta

Philadelphia, May 19 (INS)—There will be at least one unbeaten crew among the eastern college eights this evening when the sun sets on the triangular regatta between Harvard, Navy and Penn on the Schuylkill river. Neither Harvard nor the Middies have seen the wash of an opponent's boat this year, but one of them will have its record spoiled today.

Penn, beaten in both of its starts this spring, is not conceded much of a chance in today's regatta. However, due to the improvement they have shown in their second race, they loom as the "dark horse" of the race.

The distance is one mile and 550 yards. Navy is a slight favorite.

COLLEGE STAR QUITS SCHOOL TO JOIN CARDS

Florence, S. C., May 19 (AP)—Charles Wilson, Presbyterian College's baseball captain, has announced that he will quit school next week to join the St. Louis Cardinals. He made his plans known while on a visit here. Wilson hit above .400 for the Presbyterian College team this season.

By BILL McAULEY

The Woodsies, jubilant over their great victory won from the Nationals will have the fast Brooklyn Wanderers as their opponents today at Walpole st. in an American League contest and a big crowd is sure to take in this tilt as it is the last appearance of the Wanderers here this year.

The Brooklyn eleven haven't been very successful in the quest for honors this season but despite this lacking they are a colorful team and one that usually gives their opponents a hard tussle for points.

Janos Nerahoma, the Italian star recently imported by the Brooklyn club, will be making his first appearance here and quite a number will trot out to witness him in action as he comes here bearing a great reputation as a center and goal getter.

That soccer is an international game can surely be sustained by looking over the roster of the Brooklyn club for they have representatives from Scotland, England, Austria, Jerusalem, Italy, Ireland, Canada and Czecho-Slovak playing on the eleven.

Owner Nat Agar has spent considerable money getting this aggregation together and is quite confident that he will be well repaid with a winning team when the players become acquainted with each others play.

The Woodsies are coasting along and, downing the best of them, although it doesn't mean anything they being already assured of a place in the play-offs, due to winning the first half of the race.

Last week they trimmed the Nationals, a feat that hasn't been accomplished for some time, and they are quite confident that they can improve their position at the expense of Brooklyn today.

Barney Battles will lead the attack of the locals and Dave McEachren will play the left wing position in preference to the veteran Fleming.

The regular defense will do duty with Nilsen McNab and Johnny Ballantyne completing the lineup.

Yale Is Favored to Beat Harvard Today

By TED LYNCH

In one of the climactic college track meets of the year, Harvard will attempt to break Yale's five-year winning streak on the Stadium cinders this afternoon.

Harvard has not won from Yale since 1922. A year ago the Crimson trailed the Eli by four points, while the Harvard team was nosed out by one third of one point two years ago.

That scant margin might easily be duplicated this afternoon for the rival teams will enter the lists at 2 o'clock on the most even terms.

The majority of experts have picked Yale as the logical favorite. Only a few seem to see Harvard at all. But these few feel that Eddie Farrell will win his first Yale meet this afternoon.

It takes [illegible] figures [illegible] but the Farrell magnetism on his charges certainly takes care of that list toward the Crimson cause.

The two teams competing this afternoon are of two entirely different hues. Yale's team is sprinkled throughout with luminaries in the track and field game.

Harvard does not even boast of one headliner, but possesses a chorus with plenty of kick and scoring ability.

Yale arrived last night headed by such stars as Sabin Carr, former world's record holder in the pole vaults, Kieselhorst in the sprints and hurdles, Ross in the 440, and Larsen in the high jump.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

Monday night was then set as the new date for the fight. Two other clubs, the Dexter Park and the Olympia Arena, had shows listed for Monday night, but Rickard [illegible]

Mandell and McLarnin [illegible] have to weigh in this afternoon as planned. Instead they will step on the scales Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock when they must come in at or under the lightweight limit of 135 pounds.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Until he played in the qualifying round of The Country Club Cup tournament, Jimmy Conroy had played but two rounds of golf this season, and had not had a club in his hands for six weeks. Naturally, he wobbled during the early holes but he got underway at the seventh and was 81 for the round, after being two over 5's leaving the sixth green.

Conroy eliminated J. W. Hutchinson, who is a member of the Harvard varsity [illegible]

Joe Lynch gave Conroy about a week's practice and he will be one of the toughest opponents in the vicinity.

Although there is no question as to the efficiency of the current M. G. A. handicap committee, it erred when it placed Frank Whittemore [illegible] Whittemore will be [illegible] carrying a handicap as low as five who can take any liberties with the Belmont Spring man. Whittemore had a good [illegible] last season during which he played exceptionally well, but instead of getting cut, he was voted an extra stroke for this year.

For some years, Joe Noone, the caddy master, has been threatening to race around the Oakley Country Club in the 60's and yesterday he did that little thing. Joe was four under 4's for his outward round and one under coming home, with three putts on the 10th and 17th greens, for a very snappy 67. There is his card:

Out . . . . . 4 4 3 4 5 4 3 3 4—33
In . . . . . 5 4 4 4 3 4 4 4 4—34—67

[illegible] of The Country Club caddies. Through the thoughtfulness of the club, the caddies at Clyde Park are [illegible] and green raincoats on stormy days.

The rain put a damper on the first day of the Framingham Country Club open yesterday, which means that the traffic is going to be exceptionally heavy today.

George L. Willett of The Country Club is at a loss as to why a golf ball, which has had about five minutes to make up its mind as to its next move, suddenly gets restless just as a player takes his stance and costs its owner a stroke. In his match with Alex Chisholm, in The Country Club Cup, George Willett called a stroke on himself, when his ball moved as he addressed on the 15th hole. The penalty shot cost Willett the match.

Warren Hopkins refused to take any chances with [illegible] Chisholm yesterday so he [illegible] off to a 4—4—4 start and was three up on the fourth tee. But even then, Hoppy did not feel secure, knowing the fighting type of player he was matched with, and the battle was on until they had played the 13th hole.

STRATTON AND LYNCH IN FINAL

By BILL GRIMES

In the semi-final round of the Country Club Cup Emory P. Stratton of [illegible] ran rough shod [illegible] Country [illegible] and [illegible] Warren [illegible] Charles [illegible]

Stratton was [illegible] again and had a two [illegible] the [illegible] Brae Burn [illegible] the next three holes and [illegible] 14th in 48. Both Stratton and Jaques played [illegible] which [illegible]

[illegible] greens that ruined [illegible] On each occasion he missed short putts of less than a foot in length.

In the Stratton-Jaques match the Brae Burn player went out in front at the first hole when Jaques failed [illegible] squared the match by smearing a birdie 2 on the hard third hole, but Stratton came back [illegible] with a [illegible] shot by Jaques [illegible] the third hole, for Stratton after skying his drive, was home with a beautiful brassie shot and holed another birdie by a couple of inches.

Jaques came back with another [illegible] and they [illegible] the seventh with threes, [illegible] hanging on the lip of the cup. Stratton was 1 up going to the ninth hole, where Jaques, after putting his second in the trap, went over the green with his third and after accidentally hitting [illegible] for it, thereby costing him a stroke. Stratton was [illegible] in three and had a two hole lead at the turn.

They played out the bye holes as Stratton had a chance of breaking 70, but he slipped on the 18th and 18th and wound up with a 71.

Warren Hopkins was 2 up on Joe Lynch going to the eighth, but by three putting the ninth and 10th the junior champion was practically handed two holes which squared the match.

They see-sawed back and forth until the 17th, which Lynch won with a four and as he managed to halve the 18th, took the match and went into the finals with Emory Stratton.

LOW SALARIES FOR PREACHERS CONDEMNED

A study of statistics as to salaries for Protestant Episcopals reveals the following figures which speak for themselves—as compiled by The Churchman.

"Four-fifths of the clergymen in the Protestant Episcopal Church receive less than a living wage." The Churchman, a weekly journal of the Episcopal church, points out this startling fact about one of the wealthiest religious bodies in this country.

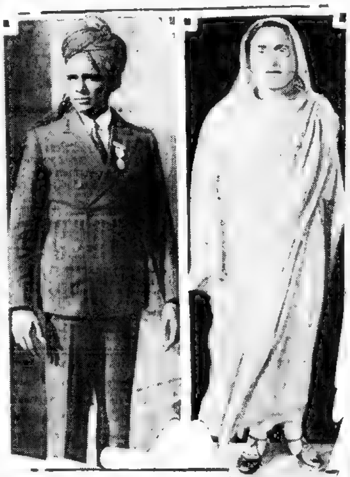
Even ministers have to live, The Churchman explains in saying: "Parsons' wives grow weary of the apparent assumption [illegible] that clergymen's families can live by some magical process more cheaply than other families."

In this Churchman article entitled "Onward Christian Soldiers! But Where Are the Rations?" the salaries of Episcopal clergymen are printed and set over against the minimum costs of food, fuel and clothing.

Some of these figures follow—518 clergymen are receiving less than $1250 a year; 659 clergymen are receiving less than $1500 a year; 1308 clergymen are receiving less than $2000 a year.

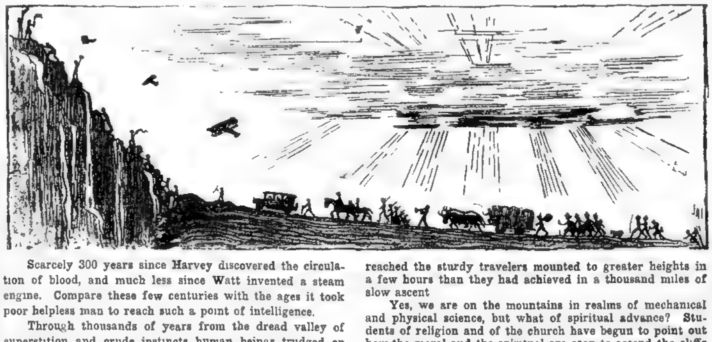
The National Council of the Episcopal Church is vigorously condemned by The Churchman for its lack of effort in increasing the salaries of the clergy and in its apparent desire, according to pronouncements quoted in The Churchman, of keeping salaries down. It is shown that clerical salaries have remained the same for 1[illegible] years while living costs have trebled.

URGES MISSION HOME RULE



Miss M. Bose of Bombay, India, and E. M. Phillips of Alligarth, India, are both delegates to the great quadrennial Methodist Episcopal conference now in session at Kansas City, Mo. The action of this important body, remommending that foreign groups have the right to elect their own bishops, came after an animated debate in which Dr. L. O. Hartman, editor of Zion's Herald, Boston, took a leading part. Effective arguments were given also by foreign delegates from India, Japan, China and other distant lands. A year will be required for this revolutionary measure to pass various stages and become a Methodist rule of government. —International Newsreel Photo

A Long, Tedious Stretch to the Mountains



Scarcely 300 years since Harvey discovered the circulation of blood, and much less since Watt invented a steam engine. Compare these few centuries with the ages it took poor helpless man to reach such a point of intelligence.

Through thousands of years from the dread valley of superstition and crude instincts human beings trudged on until the great day when the emergence of science harnessed the world.

Even so, knowledge of the laws of health and living came slowly. For ages superstition confined the science of medicine and surgery to the black arts. Then freedom and medical science unlocked the doors, and now progress is inconceivably rapid.

The race of man has progressed as travelers in early pioneer times wearily treked their way across the slowly rising prairies to the mountains. Once the Rockies were reached the sturdy travelers mounted to greater heights in a few hours than they had achieved in a thousand miles of slow ascent.

Yes, we are on the mountains in realms of mechanical and physical science, but what of spiritual advance? Students of religion and of the church have begun to point out how the moral and the spiritual are soon to ascend the cliffs as material science has done.

Should war be outlawed, should a fraternity of nations become established, should annoying credal rivalries be wiped away, and should service take the place of greedy accumulation of riches then, wise observers say, man's soul will climb the steeps as have physical achievement. But take care, say the critics and pessimists, that civilization does not fall into a carnal abyss just as it is about to rise to mountain peaks. There are tremendous dangers, but who would turn back now?

A UNITARIAN'S LIFE CREED

I am a Unitarian, a believer in one God. For me there is no salvation except I qualify in noble deeds, brave action, in the face of wrong; fine feeling for my fellowmen wherever they may be, in just and generous treatment of each dependent human being.

If I am mean or low or vile, no doctrine saves my soul. For me no miracle has ever been, but life is one tremendous marvel all the time. The Galilean lad for me is ten times hero because He met temptations, life's problems, passions within, and prejudice without, the same that come to me, and fought His way step by step until He became the ruler of himself, a master in His own peculiar right. He made mistakes; and blunders taught Him wisdom. He was a man, but such a man as filled himself with God.

The Bible tells me how a noble race grew, and how these people worked their way up and through to higher living. The book was written by many hands pushed on by many minds of limited intelligence, some very wise, and others common clay. I love the book because it is a human record of spiritual development.

I bow to earth before no human being, but study all, to learn the way to mount unto a goal for all mankind—a brotherhood of men who think only how they serve.

POLICE WILL NOT DISTURB FEDERATION MEETINGS

Representatives of the churches in Boston will again be on Boston Common mall next Sunday afternoon 2.30 to 4.15, and they will be there with plenty of credentials to make any such heroic work as was indulged in by police last week civically unnecessary.

UNITARIANS TURN TOWARD WELFARE WORK

There is a fresh note singing through the program of the Anniversary Week of the American Unitarian Association to be held in Boston May 20-26. Of[illegible] devoted large [illegible] to ruffle the smooth surface of a rapping, harmonious six days conducted along Unitarian lines with the pleasant smile and the hearty handshake.

A close study of meetings and speakers, however, indicates possible controversial matters handled by people of controversial temperament. The return of the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, definitely within the inner ring of anniversary attractions, may cause extreme harmoneers an extra heart flutter. Dr. Holmes never meant outstanding harmony within the Unitarian denomination and there were those who breathed more freely when he switched onto a siding of Community church activities.

He has always had a way of saying what he believes, even though what he says hits hard a church, a denomination, or an entire community and nation. This year he has been invited to address an audience in the oldest of Boston's churches, where tradition is written large in stained glass and on tablet. He will hurl his message, "Economic Justice the Basis of World Peace," at an audience in the First Church on Marlboro st., Monday afternoon at 6:30 as part of the session of Social Justice.

Mr. Holmes has a second subject, "Shall We Abandon Prohibition?" which may not be relished by some, but will find plenty of sympathizers. This talk will be given at the Monday [illegible] session, to be held at the rooms of the Twentieth Century Club, 3 Joy st.

The treatment of social, political and economic welfare topics at this year's anniversary is undoubtedly the real news. The Wednesday evening meeting in the Arlington [illegible], in accordance with a vote taken last year, will devote part of the time to such vital matters. The Rev. F. Ernest Johnson of the Federal Council of Churches, who made a study of prohibition in the United States, will take for his theme "Coal and Christianity," and will deal, no doubt, with present day conditions in Pennsylvania.

Still another address which is looked forward to with curiosity and interest will be delivered by Maj. George W. Stephens, late chairman of the League of Nations Commission of the Saar Valley, who will speak on "International Co-Operation, or International Slaughter—Which?"

"LITTLE SINS" By KATHARINE BRUSH

Dolly Was Impressed by His Smiling, Undergraduate Manner

"Well," she said to Dolly, "we're almost there."

Dolly liked him at once—his expansive smile.

A Story of Gay Life at Harvard; a Battle of Hearts Between Girls

Gay Leonard, spoiled darling of fortune, is loved by Alan Pomeroy, a worthwhile athletic young man. She is fascinated, however, by Jerry Davis of questionable reputation. To get her away from him her family take her on an eight months' trip. Meanwhile she thinks only of Jerry. She is jealous of Dolly Quinn, whom he has met in a cabaret where Dolly has taken a job as hostess to earn extra money for art lessons. While Gay is away Jerry falls in love with Dolly and tells her so, but she does not care for him in that way. Through Nick Standish, a newspaper man, she is selected to enter a beauty contest. Jerry protests in vain. Gay comes back and is a guest at a lively house party nearby. Mrs. Matthews, her hostess, admits that she would like to see Gay marry Alan. She confesses she loves Jerry. During the evening's festivities Alan tries to get her to go outdoors. She refuses. She learns that Dolly Quinn is in the beauty contest and makes up her mind that she must see it—so she and Alan remain as guests of the Matthews.

CHAPTER 18

THE parlor car squeaked like cheap new shoes, and shuddered down its length. It was hard to hold your balance going along the aisle, you had to grasp the backs of the chairs to steady yourself . . . In the little square wash room with the red-brown woodwork and the mirrors and the shiny nickel basins, it was harder still. Everything swayed. The green curtains that shrouded the door swayed. The water you drew in one basin slid jelly-like from side to side. The triangular towels with the blue belts vibrated on their lofty iron rack. Everything kept time to the tune of the train, to the thunderous drum of its wheels.

"We'll be there soon," remarked Mrs. Minafee.

"Yes," said Dolly. "In about fifteen minutes, Nick said. Oh, shoot!—how do you work this soap jigger, Minnie?"

Mrs. Minafee demonstrated. Importantly. Mrs. Minafee did all things importantly. She was a plump, shapeless person, made of pillows; a florid and shortwinded person, whose body belonged to ease, but whose spirit, lodged in that body like wheels in a pudding, drove her on a lifelong round of busyness.

She sat down now on the single chair and regarded Dolly's back with bright, pleased eyes. Her expression was one of pride, possessive pride. Even maternal pride. At the same time she looked a trifle awed.

Dolly Quinn as one of her boarders had never awed Mrs. Minafee, but Dolly Quinn as Miss Manhattan, prize beauty, bewitchingly garbed and on her way to receive the adulation of myriads—well, there was a glamour strange and new about this Dolly.

Only by reminding herself of her own promotion from the rank of landlady to that of beauty's chaperon did Mrs. Minafee conquer an impulse toward actual humility.

Sitting forward in her chair, one pulpy elbow resting on the ledge beside her, she optically itemized Dolly's attire and gloated over it. The tan kid shoes with the big bronze buckles. The chiffon arrow-heeled hose. The tan gown. A simple gown, subtly striking; part of an ensemble. A tan cloth coat lined with the silk of the dress, collared and cuffed widely in summer ermine, went with it. And a most becoming tan beret, with an odd wee bronze ornament.

A certain wardrobe trunk in the baggage car contained, Mrs. Minafee knew, many other garments and accessories, equally exquisite. The woman who did fashions for the Star had helped Dolly select them; and the Star had paid the breath-taking bills.

"Grand!" thought Mrs. Minafee ecstatically.

Dolly reached for a towel and dried her hands, holding them carefully at arms' length. She turned to a mirror, and seeing her chaperon's reflected eyes upon her, smiled dazzlingly. Then Mrs. Minafee thought, "She will, she'll be the prettiest thing there." Mr. Standish, the fellow from the Star, thought so, too.

"But I won't tell her," Mrs. Minafee determined. "She's going to get spoiled enough the next few days, if what he says about the fuss they make over them is true."

She spoke aloud. "Fix your name-tape, dearie. Or whatever you call that thing."

Dolly confronted her, fingers fidgeting worriedly at the white satin gold-lettered ribbon across her chest. "Isn't it all right?"

It was quite all right. But Mrs. Minafee wanted something to do, some part in the preparation of this delicacy for the imminent feast of eyes. "Could be better," she said critically. "Come here, I'll fix it for you. You want to be sure every letter shows, you know, so folks can read who you are."

"Nick says there'll be a mob at the station—" began Dolly, but stopped as the green curtains yawned to admit one of her competitors, name unknown, label Miss Bronx.

Miss Bronx was sociable. She had been sociable throughout the trip, in a superior, professional to amateur sort of way—for this was the second Atlantic City pageant to which she had lent her rather metallic pulchritude.

"Well," she said, "we're almost there."

"Almost."

"Suppose you're getting all nervoused up?"

"No," said Dolly firmly, "not a bit."

Miss Bronx whipped out a pocket comb and raked it gingerly through her russet marcel. "If I had long hair like you," she remarked, "I'd wear it down my back in corkscrew curls. All the girls do at the Pageant who have long hair. Most of 'em anyway."

"I think that's silly," said Dolly, "when you're grown up."

"Looks good, though."

"Straighten the seam of your stocking, dearie," Mrs. Minafee directed. "No, the other one."

"We got a swell manager," continued Miss Bronx. "Standish; he's good. He'll see we get lots of publicity. The one we had the last Pageant I was to—say, he was the bunk. Cock-eyed drunk all the time he was down here. I guess they fired him off the Star when he got back."

She pawed in a brocaded handbag and brought forth a lipstick. "Got to put this on easy," she observed. "The judges aren't so hot for the make-up."

"Will the judges be at the station?" Dolly asked with swift eagerness.

"Don't suppose so. But if I wear red lips now I got to stick to 'em all week, that's the thing." Miss Bronx smirked knowingly. "Why all the worry about the judges?"

"I just want to see them, that's all."

"You mean you want 'em to see you!"

"No," said Dolly. "I want to see them. Some of them are famous artists and I——" She hesitated. "I just am sort of curious to see them."

"Well, you'll see 'em plenty," predicted Miss Bronx, patting her pointed chin with a grayish-pink powder pad. "You'll be sick of the sight of 'em Thursday, after you've stood for I don't know how long on the stage up at the high school while they buzz around you like a flock of gnats with notebooks in their hands. Whew, boy! And if you get picked for the semi-finals on Friday——" Here Miss Bronx shot a glance at Dolly via the mirror. "Only 15 are picked, you know——"

"I won't be," said Dolly agreeably. "Come on, Minnie. I'm ready now."

In the passageway outside the door she leaned against the wall and looked up at Mrs. Minafee with solemn sapphire eyes. "Minnie," she said, "did you he[illegible] her I wasn't nervous?"

"Sure did, dearie."

"Feel my hands."

Mrs. Minafee clasped the little hands with both of hers. They were ice cold.

She stepped down on to the porter's yellow box, and then on to the platform, and for an instant stood stockstill, fighting off an insane desire to dive back into the train again. So many people! "Too many," she muttered rather indignantly to Nick, who paused at her side.

The station yard had been roped off. Outside the ropes, herded like animals, straining and pushing and stretching their necks, the people waited. Thousands of them. A dense human thicket, blocks in area.

Inside the ropes there were more people. People wearing badges of green and white and blue, scurrying distracted about. Musicians in dark uniforms playing [illegible]. Policemen on foot and on horse. Photographers. Reporters. Chaperons. Girls, girls, girls.

Nick's fingers gave her elbow a quick encouraging pressure. "Now, urchin," he said, "up and at 'em! Listen, see the bleachers over there?"

The bleachers stood across the station yard, facing the platform; a temporary wooden structure, four tiers high.

A CHARMING SUMMER FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL

6148. A very pretty model, nice for printed georgette, printed chiffon or voile is here shown.

The sleeve may be in wrist length or short, as pictured in the large view.

Soft gathers at the neck lend pleasing fullness.

Broad girdle sections are tied in a graceful sash bow at the center front, above the flare skirt, to which the waist portions are joined.

Printed crepe with bindings in a matched color would also be a pleasing development of this style.

This pattern is cut in four sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 12 year size will require 3⅝ yards of 39-inch material if made with long sleeves. With the sleeves short, 3¼ yards will be required.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c. in silver or stamps.

Send 12c. in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE SPRING AND SUMMER 1928 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

Trader Horn Tells How He Made a Compact With Natives

CHAPTER 29

THE celebrations of [illegible] I had no control over. Even Old Iwolo supped off. I had only one line-eyed man in the crowd perfectly sober and that was Renchoro.

On awakening I was surprised to find the island visited by many natives, some Okellys and some Mpangues who were quietly waiting for my waking. Of course I gave audience to the Okelly chief, who was younger brother of Apaques. He had heard of my doings and had come to see if I intended starting business again and this I assured him would be done.

He pointed down stream to a large number of vultures which were circling high in the air above the old battle place. I was careful to make no allusion to the fight.

He told me that he had many cutting rubber and many more were coming from Engella who intended to settle on the land, and declared the rubber was not only good but there was a life's supply, it was to be found in larger quantities than they had ever expected to see and of course they were anxious to have a trading station again on the island. I assured the good chief that I would send him two traders as soon as possible to Apaques and I knew this [illegible] would be well.

After this he left fully satisfied [illegible] and next came M[illegible] the chief who explained his [illegible] and he also withdrew promising his loyal support against any man who should at any time [illegible] the trade of his country. I now called on all my traders [illegible] and counselled them to say nothing about what had happened.

We now dipped paddles and went our way rejoicing. Passing the point where the cannibals had made [illegible] stout [illegible] we [illegible] many black vultures who were [illegible] having high times on shore and the most ghastly sight of all was the torn body of the man who shot the rifle. He was still hanging to the tree [illegible] down [illegible] by [illegible] feet in a fork.

I mentioned the advisability of [illegible] for the rifle he had let drop in the river but this they would not do as they were afraid of the imburas of spirits of the dead which they declared would forever haunt that spot.

Later I recovered the rifle and it proved to be an old Snider which had been stolen from the firm I was representing.

We were soon racing for who should land at Apaques first. As my canoe was always manned by white [illegible] canoe men in the world we were [illegible] speed. My [illegible] the rum which was always [illegible] incentive as [illegible] always to catch us at [illegible] and the ones left missed their rum.

At times the race was very close and we reached Samquitte by sundown and after a short rest made for my [illegible] And were [illegible] welcomes. This was [illegible] sweet home for me, [illegible] in near old Apaques [illegible] received all the news from the [illegible] it was.

The battle especially excited him as they had seen the passing [illegible] ward of the defeated [illegible] me. But as he had [illegible] message he had given [illegible] his people not to attack [illegible] he could not understand why I had not sent him word as the two of us could have wiped [illegible] out. I explained that one [illegible] was a better man to deal with [illegible] unbeaten one.

Use Plenty of Eggs, Advises Martha Lee

By MARTHA LEE

IN spring, every economical housewife's fancy turns to thoughts of an abundant use of eggs on her menus. For in the spring [illegible] are at their cheapest. Now is the time to revel not only in ham and eggs, eggs a la this or that, but also to indulge that desire that every good cook has to use eggs lavishly in her cooking.

Following are a few recipes for delicious and unusual dishes, ranging all the way from soups to desserts, that call for the use of eggs either as an active ingredient or as a dressy garnish.

Tomato Omelet—Saute 1 tbsp. chopped onion and 1 tbsp. chopped green pepper in 2 tbsp. butter until a light brown. Add pulp from 1 can of tomatoes and season with one tsp. salt, one-half tsp. paprika and a pinch of thyme. Simmer gently a few minutes. Beat 3 egg yolks until thick and lemon colored.

Beat whites until stiff. Fold together and then fold in carefully the tomato mixture. Return to hot greased skillet and cook slowly as for a plain omelet. When knife comes out clean, fold over in omelet shape onto a hot platter. This serves four people.

Corn and Pepper Pudding—Beat the yolk of 1 egg, add 1 chopped green pepper, one No. 2 can of corn, two-thirds tsp. salt and one-third cup milk. Fold in stiffly beaten white. Put in buttered baking dish and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F, thirty minutes).

Apple Cup Custards—Beat 3 egg yolks slightly and add [illegible] sugar, 1 tbsp. lemon juice, 2 c. apple sauce and ¾ c. milk and ⅛ tsp. [illegible]. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and sprinkle nutmeg over top after pouring into custard cups.

Set in hot water and bake in slow oven, 325 degrees for about forty minutes, or until set. Serve cold. Serves eight.

Egg and Asparagus Salad—Cut 6 hard cooked eggs in half lengthwise and remove yolks. Mash yolks and 1 c. asparagus tips with a fork. Add 2 tsp. lemon juice, [illegible] tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, ½ tsp. [illegible] 3 tbsp. chopped nuts and [illegible] in the whites.

Serve on lettuce and [illegible] with more asparagus tips, and [illegible] nuts sprinkled over [illegible]. Serves six.

Tomato and Pea Cutlets—Combine 1 c. of drained peas, [illegible] white sauce and 2 [illegible] egg yolks. Drop [illegible] into hot, buttered skillet [illegible] brown, turning over on[illegible] of ripe tomato [illegible] with salt and pepper [illegible] in which [illegible] cooked. Serve [illegible] of tomato. Serves eight.

Deviled Eggs with Pineapple—Cut 6 hard boiled eggs lengthwise, remove yolks and mix with 1 c. crushed pineapple, 1 tbsp. vinegar and ½ tsp. salt. Pile pineapple mixture [illegible] eggs and [illegible] on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise or Russian dressing.

Pineapple Omelet — Beat 4 egg yolks until light, with 1 tbsp. powdered sugar and ½ tsp. salt. [illegible]

Correct Manners Explained

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

GRATEFUL READER—Escort holds a lady's arm or vice versa only when occasion warrants. Kid pumps would be better.

M. M. B.—Minister's wife should also be invited. Customary fee $10. Of course more can be given.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for me to answer my personal letters on the typewriter? I do work in my home with my typewriter and as I have a family to care for I do not find much time to answer my letters and I receive many of them. I could keep these all answered if I could type them, but otherwise I just cannot answer them, for I receive as high as forty letters a week.

O. L. K.

THIS question as to whether or not it is good form to write social letters on the typewriter has many adherents on both sides. All one can give on this subject is a personal answer, a question of choice and taste. And, personally, typewritten letter that is a purely social one is not attractive and no indicative of the best taste. On the other side, however, there are people who maintain that life is so hurried nowadays and so full of duties that letters may be typewritten with taste. Your list of correspondents is certainly a high one, and you must have many close friends. If you find it impossible to answer all these letters by hand, I am sure that your friends will be so grateful to hear from you that they will welcome a letter, even though typewritten.

IN BAD HEALTH FOR SIX YEARS

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Arapahoe, Okla.—"I want to tell you just what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was in bad health for about six years. My nerves were all to pieces. I could not sleep and wasn't able to do my housework. Now I feel so much better! I sleep like a baby. I can do all my housework, washing and ironing and feel fine all the time. I help my husband some in the field, too, so you see we have something to praise the Vegetable Compound for. I will gladly answer all letters asking about the Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines."—MRS. LUTHER HISSE, Box 565, Westwood, California.

ALMOST A MIRACLE PERFORMED

If this happened in your family you, too, would call it a miracle.

Mrs. Julia Libby, Goodyear Ave., Melrose (Mass.), writes: "Not long ago, when my youngest daughter was 3 years old, I had occasion to use Dr. True's Elixir when she was suddenly afflicted with a twitching of the mouth. She did not improve. Finally, I happened to notice Dr. True's Elixir advertised. I gave her several doses which resulted in worms being expelled to the extent that in a remarkably short time her face returned to normal again and she has been in the best of health ever since. It is certainly a wonderful laxative and worm expeller, as it performed what seemed almost a miracle for me. I can't praise it too highly."

Julia Libby's Girl

Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pains, pale face, eyes heavy, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red points on the tongue, starting during sleep with troublesome dreams, slow fever.

ARE YOU LIBERAL MINDED ABOUT MEN AND AFFAIRS

By J. J. MUNDY

YOU like to think of yourself as broad-minded and liberal in your ide concerning people and matters in general.

But are you?

Isn't it a fact that in very many things you are narrow-minded?

Positively one-sided, biased and selfish, if the truth were told.

Are you willing to be as big and generous in your home as you appear to be outside?

Are you willing to go 50-50 with others in your home, to whom you should show consideration?

Are you not prone to emphasize and to try to impress others with the idea that you are lord and master of the place you call home?

You may argue at home, but you cannot argue with those away from your fireside because you wish to enjoy the reputation of being amiable and companionable.

But in the home are you not arbitrary and demanding?

Think it over and decide whether you would like to change places with the members of your family and take the sort of thing you give them

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND.

BEHOLD, my Daughter, the Season of Sorrows approacheth when the sunburneth the back of the neck, freckleth the nose, and bringeth lassitude to the spirit.

* * *

The housefly girdeth up his wings for business and the mosquito sharpenth his weapons for war. The Summer landlord layeth in his supply of canned vegetables and the Summer sheik filleth his hope chest with blinding golf hose and irresistible haberdashery.

* * *

Yet, be of good cheer, for there is still much cause for rejoicing! Yes, let us give praise and thanksgiving for these things:

* * *

That lilacs and apple blossoms still continue to sweeten the air, in spite of gasoline and filling stations—and that the June wedding announcements prove that not ALL the marrying men are dead!

* * *

That no matter how valiantly a man may struggle against matrimony, middle age, sentimental weakness, or a woman, they will all "GET him" in the end.

* * *

That there is no law compelling a bobbed haired woman to go back to the horrors of long tresses and the torments of long skirts.

* * *

That there are only 24 hours in the day in which a woman can make a fool of herself.

* * *

That, whatsoever a woman's weight, she can always find consolation in observing another woman who is FATTER. And whatsoever she may have drawn in the matrimonial lottery, she can always find solace in seeing the greater "afflictions" which other women put up with.

That radios can be turned off, night clubs pass away, and the last derby hat shall soon go to its rest among the moth balls.

That the new silk suits with fluffy skirts make women easier upon the eyes, after the frankness of sunburned thighs and wobbly hips in clinging jersey.

* * *

That it hath come to pass, in this day of wonders, that no woman is too young for a job nor too old for a love affair.

* * *

That, while the happiest marriages may be made in France, the happiest divorces are still made in America.

* * *

That there are such things as Spring nights, perennial flappers, jazz-less orchestras, rambler roses, permanent waves, old-fashioned shortcake, safety razors, can openers, flying heroes, unspoiled men and feminine women!

And while these still abound, how shall any woman be filled with pessimism? SELAH.

IS YOUR HAIR beginning to fall out and look dull and devoid of color? There is a hair tonic which has a very refreshing effect on the scalp—it stimulates the growth of hair and removes instantly every bit of dandruff. It prevents grayness, when properly applied, and makes the hair delightfully soft and shiny, keeping it from falling out. It is put up in two forms, one for oily and the other for dry scalps, priced at $1.00 a bottle.

ARE YOU LOOKING for a new spring coat at a reasonable price? I know where there is a closing-out sale of coats at big reductions. There are lovely coats for tailored, sport or formal wear priced at $19.50, regularly $25-$29 and $35. PERHAPS YOUR SCALP is rather dry and you cannot afford for that reason to lose any of the natural oil. You'll like an especially prepared shampoo soap which cleanses thoroughly without absorbing that natural oil so necessary for healthy scalps. This soap leaves the hair soft and beautifully glossy and is priced at only 15c a cake.

SHEER AND EXQUISITELY LOVELY are some semi-chiffon hose priced at $1.00. These are regularly $1.50 value and combine the cobweb fineness of chiffon with the durability of service weight hose. There are many more good values in this same shop.

PERHAPS you are waiting to get that smart sport hat to go with your ensemble because you feel they are too expensive. If so, write to me and I will tell you where to get the most adorable blue, black or red felts, plain or straw trimmed for $2. There are some matrons' black hats also at this price in large headsizes.

WALKING ON THE GOLF LINKS, hiking through the country, and all the walks that come with good weather make you remember the care of your feet. Public Officials Endorse Boston American's Offer of

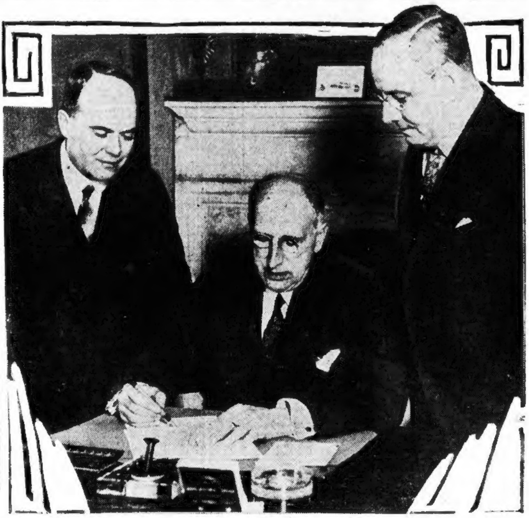
$10,000 ACCIDENT INSURANCE POLICY AT ONLY $1

Nothing More to Pay!

Mayor and Ex-Registrar at Signing of Contract of Safety and Protection for New England



M. C. Priest, Assistant Publisher of the Boston Evening American signing the contract by which this newspaper arranged for the purchase of one million $10,000 accident insurance policies for $1 each and agreed to distribute these policies to the people of New England without profit, all additional expenses to be borne by the Boston Evening American. Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols is at the right, Ex-Registrar Frank A. Goodwin, Highway Safety Editor of the Boston Evening American, is at the left.

THE Boston Evening American has launched the most vigorous campaign to prevent accidents in the history of New England. This newspaper has devoted time, effort and money to save lives, to PROTECT the people of New England who are every day subject to injury or death by accident. Now we go still further and offer to every person between 15 and 70 years of age, a $10-000 accident insurance policy for ONE DOLLAR.

The Boston American, with the hearty endorsement of civic and business leaders, launches this campaign in the spirit of public service. We believe no man continually subjecting himself to accident in modern daily life has any right to leave his family unprotected.

There are no complications to this offer. You don't have to take a physical examination. You don't have to pay anything more than the $1.00 registration fee, every cent of which goes to the insurance company. In the event of injury or death, you or your beneficiaries don't have to concern yourselves with the question, "Whose fault was it?" The policies are underwritten by the North American Accident Insurance Company, one of the oldest and largest in the United States.

Accidents always seem to happen to those least expecting them, yet scarcely 2% of those killed or injured through accident have made any arrangement at all for their dependents. The Boston Evening American is powerless to prevent the physical hardships that result from accidents, but it CAN AND DOES protect the family and the individual from want and privation that follow in the wake of accidents.

PROTECT YOURSELF

Statistics show that 876,000 persons are under sentence of death by accident during the next ten years.

23 persons are accidentally injured every minute; 1380 every hour; 33,120 every day;

One person is accidentally killed every six minutes; 10 every hour; 240 every day; 87,600 every year.

More than 7000 passengers and employes are killed each year in railroad accidents.

Accidents occur 113 times as often as fires.

One person in every nine meets with some form of accidental injury each year.

One death in 11 results from an accident.

Automobiles kill 26,800 persons each year.

'EL' HEAD LAUDS INSURANCE AS SAFETY AID

Adding his hearty endorsement of the Boston Evening American's remarkable insurance offer of a $10,000 accident policy for $1 a year to those of Mayor Nichols and former Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, Edward A. Dana, president of the Massachusetts Safety Council and general manager of the Boston Elevated Railway said today:

Edward A. Dana

"The Boston Evening American is in my opinion furthering the cause of safety on the highways substantially through its plan of $10,000 insurance policy for a minimum charge of $1.

"It is a practical way of focusing attention both on the dangers in the highway which somehow seem not to be fully appreciated, as well as focusing attention on the other side of the situation, namely, protection for those who pay the penalty of carelessness, either by themselves or others.

"To combat carelessness and further the cause of safety, a widespread popular arrangement such as this ought to have a far reaching effect on the present situation and help to produce a marked decrease in the curve of accidents. Boston went an entire week without a death case on the highway.

"If such a record can be maintained one week it ought to be the aim of all concerned to keep everlastingly at the problem until our highways are really safe.

"The action which the Boston American is taking ought to have a tremendous influence on the situation."

Applications for the Boston Evening American's remarkable insurance offer of a $10,000 accident policy for $1 a year are now pouring into the offices at 5 Winthrop sq. Every mail is bringing additional filled-out coupons from the thousands of Boston Evening American readers all over New England, who are quick to recognize the great public service rendered by this newspaper—that of providing $10,000 worth of protection at a cost within reach of everyone.

Think of it—$10,000 protection for yourself, your wife and other members of your family for one year at only $1.

No physical examinations are necessary. There is no red tape. There is no financial profit to the Boston Evening American. These policies are provided at cost to its readers as a part of the Boston Evening American's plan to safeguard the public against accident.

Simply fill out the coupon published elsewhere in this paper and send or bring it with $1 to the office of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, and you will receive your policy.

Mayor Nichols and former Registrar of Motor Vehicles, Frank A. Goodwin have already given their hearty endorsement of the Boston Evening American's insurance-at-cost plan. Other prominent men in official and private life are coming to the front in their praise of the plan to provide this protection for the citizens of Massachusetts and New England.

HOUGHTON GETS BRITISH NOTE

London, May 19 (INS)—Great Britain's reply to the American proposal for a treaty outlawing war, which is understood to accept the proposals, was handed to American Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton this afternoon.

The note does not contain the opinions of the British overseas dominions nor Ireland. The communication will be made public here this evening. It is believed the note gives unqualified acceptance in principle. It was understood Great Britain suggests every nation which signs the proposed anti-war treaty shall attach a collateral document giving its own interpretation of the pact.

The acceptance of the American peace plan was due to a large extent to public opinion, which has strongly supported the Kellogg proposal.

BAY STATE FLIERS FORCED DOWN AT MADISON, L. I.

Guilford, Ct., May 19 (INS)—A Sikorsky amphibian plane, bound for New York along the Long Island Sound route, spent the night here after heavy weather led the pilot to drop at Madison. The plane took off today after a smashed pontoon, received by contact with a submerged rock, was repaired.

Passengers were John A. Bauer of Springfield, Mass., and his son, John; C. A. Dickerson, of Fitchburg, Mass., and E. W. Woods and H. J. White, of New York, two officials of the Sikorsky company. Woods and White staid with the plane while the others went to New York by train.

HUNDREDS DELAYED IN "L" RUSH-HOUR TIEUP

Hundreds of Elevated car riders from Everett and Malden were delayed at the peak of the morning rush hours today when an inward bound car jumped the rails just outside Everett station. Cars following were tied up for nearly a mile while worried workers waited and finally walked to the rapid transit station.

SEIZE MOONSHINE AND STILL IN REVERE HOME

Sergeant Cornelius F. Cronin and members of the Revere police liquor squad today raided the home of Morris Grodsim in Long st., Revere, and seized 100 gallons of moonshine, $500 gallons of mash and a 50-gallon still. Grodsin was charged with the illegal manufacturing of liquor.

$150.00 Reward for Best "Don'ts" on Safety

The Boston Evening American is offering 78 cash prizes for the most effective sets of ten "Mothers' Safety Don'ts" to guard children from the auto peril.

The first prize will be $50, second $15, third $10, and there will be 75 $1 prizes.

Awards will be made on common sense, practical views, rather than for literary effort.

The judges are Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, wife of the governor, Capt. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles; Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson and Assistant Superintendent Augustine L. Rafter of the Boston public schools.

Kindly write your "Don'ts" on a separate sheet, using one side of the paper. In your letter state number of children and ages. Write legibly and include name and address. Direct letters to Editor Mothers' Safety Don'ts, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

SAFER TO PLAY GRASSHOPPER IN STREET

ago, but it seems to me that one fact has been lost sight of, and, now that you are no longer connected with the State, perhaps it would be well to bring to your mind that at the time the emblem of the codfish was hung in the Senate chamber to symbolize the wealth derived by or from the sea, a gilded grasshopper was placed on Faneuil Hall in symbolism of the wealth derived from the land.

"It seems that so long as the cod decorates the number plates on our automobiles, the pedestrian could do no better than to take as his symbol the grasshopper from Faneuil Hall.

"Many and many a time in crossing a street, I have come to a sudden halt or made a sudden spring to escape a car that had whirled around the corner and was almost upon me before I could safely reach the curb.

"At such time, I have fervently wished that I could spring like the grasshopper, and, soaring over the car, reach the sidewalk in safety.

"Really I think you will see that grasshopper is a shining example for all people who go abroad on foot today."

Now it may be well to join these two suggestions—that is to license pedestrians and issue tags decorated with the grasshopper.

While the above may be entertaining, it has to do with the most vital question affecting our highway menace.

PEDESTRIAN HAS THE RIGHT

No matter what the operator may think of the pedestrian or what the pedestrian may think of the driver, their relative rights and duties are governed by law.

The pedestrian HAS THE RIGHT OF WAY AT ALL TIMES and no city, town or police regulation can take that RIGHT away from him.

The law says that a motorist upon approaching a pedestrian in the travelled part of the highway MUST slow down and SOUND A TIMELY WARNING.

The most important distinction between a motorist and pedestrian is this—the pedestrian has a RIGHT on the street, while the motorist only has a PRIVILEGE, granted to him by the State to be exercised in such manner only as to make sure that he does not interfere unlawfully with the rights or privileges of others.

The operator of a motor vehicle MUST give way to the pedestrian because he may kill or maim, but the unfortunate thing about it all is that many motorist do not seem to know this, with the result that even though the pedestrian knows he has the PRIOR RIGHT, he ought to realize that it is safer to imitate the grasshopper than to take the chance of having grasshoppers playing leapfrog over his head in some peaceful graveyard.

Let every pedestrian memorize this little verse:

"Here lies the body of William Ray,
He died maintaining his right of way.
He was right, dead right, as he walked along.
But he's just as dead as if he had been wrong."

SMITH, HOOVER FAR IN LEAD IN OREGON

Portland, Ore., May 19 (AP)—For Democratic nomination for President, 516 precincts of 1842 in Oregon give: Smith, 5252; Walsh, 3417; Reid, 1937. For Republican nomination for President 797 precincts give: Hoover, 39,332; Lowden, 7.

Washington, May 19 (AP)—Not counting the Oregon group, Hoover's total today was 506½. His opponents claim that 196 of these are not in the Hoover column. A total of 545 or a majority, is necessary to nominate. Smith stands to pick up ten delegates in Oregon to add to his present total of 603½. Two-thirds, or 733½, will put a candidate over in the Democratic convention.

The Fireman's Suspenders

Save Them!

We have become so inured to prohibitions, inhibitions, interdictions and restraints in general that perhaps one more should not disturb us, and yet we feel it would be faithless not to go on record in favor of "galluses."

If you succeed this week in making your way to Malden through the traffic you will observe that the fire-fighters of that city are wearing BELTS.

You need not take our word for it, ask anyone!

Do not jump to the conclusion that the firemen have gone back on galluses, it's "orders." They're no belted earls, and if all of a sudden they appear to have turned "Joe College" it is only because they have been compelled, coerced and driven to drop their suspenders.

The order came from Fire Commissioner C. David Berg, whose first name must be "Cold." "Belts instead of suspenders," says this Mr. Berg, "GRAY shirts instead of black."

Is there manhood left in Malden? Where stands John Devir on this great question? Suspenders, as they are called on Sunday, braces, when they appear in Society, gallowses in the dictionary, good old "galluses," have been man's best friend, his chief support, his main backstay, for centuries.

They're the very badge and certificate of manhood. Babies wear dresses, little boys button "them" onto waists, galluses come with young manhood. Belts! On fire-fighters? Oh, gosh!

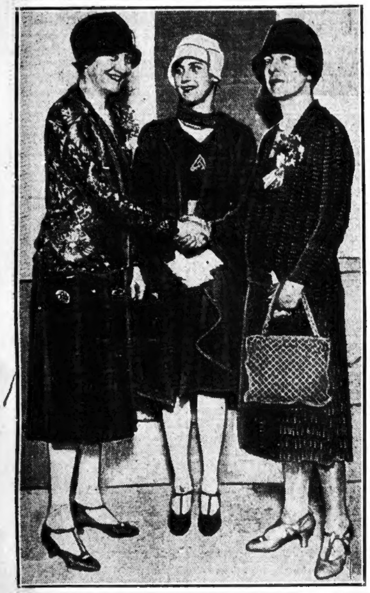
The Berg rule will prevail in his OWN burg only. Lynn, we are glad to see, has gone on record. "I always support my men," Chief Chase says, "and I'll see that they have proper support when it comes to holding their trousers up. I'm for suspenders."

Good for Chase, but we wish he had said "pants." If the firemen wear trousers, they may be permitted to wear belts. Pants or breeches call for suspenders.

We should like to know what "galluses" ever did to Dave Berg. If he says they have failed him he should be compelled to say where, when and under what circumstances. He has raised an issue here which is not going to be settled in whispers or by any little clique in a back room at 2 o'clock in the morning, at Kansas City, in Houston or in Malden.

Nice American Girls

And All Happy



MOTHER, DAUGHTER, FRIEND

The lady smiling on the left is Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, daughter of the powerful Mark Hanna and widow of Medill McCormick, recently Senator from Illinois. The pleasing young girl in the middle is Katherine McCormick, daughter of Ruth McCormick, and the lady on the extreme right is Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of Theodore Roosevelt, who expects her husband, the Speaker of the House, to be elected President pretty soon.

With Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick it isn't "pretty soon." She has triumphantly won at the primaries in Illinois, and will undoubtedly be chosen Congressman-at-Large from her State.

She OUGHT to be elected, and good citizens of Illinois should be proud to vote for her. An earnest woman, she will represent in Congress sincerity and intelligence, good qualities of American womanhood.

Apart from politics this picture should interest you, for young American women are the nation's hope.

The young girl in the middle may be the first female President of the United States, who knows?

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE AUTO

By DR. FRANK CRANE

W. P. HERBERT, of the Chandler Distributors Company, furnishes some interesting statistics about the automobile.

Twenty-five years ago the motorcar was still an experiment and regarded by many as a toy or a fad.

Very few manufacturers were producing efficient machines and those were fashioned after the familiar buggy.

But at the beginning of the year 1927 there was one automobile registered for every five persons in the United States, or 24,589,249 motor-vehicles.

Fifty-five per cent of the families in the United States own motorcars. The motor industry pays about $6,000,000,000 a year in wages to nearly 4,000,000 persons. Taxes that amount to $700,000,000 are collected from the industry, which ranks first in the country in the value of its products and third in exports. About 14 per cent of all the rolled iron and steel of the country is used in manufacturing automobiles.

Fifty per cent of the plate glass produced in the United States, 63 per cent of the upholstered leather and 11 per cent of the hardwood used here, besides 84 per cent of the crude rubber used in the country goes toward this industry.

Seven and one-half per cent of the total exports is represented by the automotive industry.

The automobile is not only a luxury. One can hardly transact his business today without it.

Five hundred railroads in the United States and Canada use this service and many more are using motorbuses. Thousands of firms are using motor cars and truck for delivery purposes.

The automobile has brought town and country closer together. It has thinned the dense population of the major cities.

It has been a boon to the farmers by making possible rapid transportation of their crops to market. In spite of the enormous growth of the industry there is still a lively market both at home and abroad for cars. The replacement market is getting larger constantly, as well as the two-car field.

The immense growth of the Ford Motor Company and the General Motors Company is well-known. Who shall say what is the future of the automotive industry?

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ANNE came in to see me. More trouble at home. Mother throwing fits because Anne went off to a week-end party without a chaperone. Mother says she would never have dreamed of doing a thing like that when she was Anne's age. That is quite true. But that isn't all there is to the story.

I remember Anne's mother when she was 19. We were classmates. It is true that we were model young ladies. But it is also true, although this fact is not so generally mentioned, that we couldn't be anything else. We were pretty and proper, but that let us out. As human beings we were total flops at the age of 19.

Neither one of us had ever earned a dollar nor did we know any work by which we could earn a dollar. Nice girls didn't work in those days even when their fathers were in humble circumstances — as ours were. Our parents had all the money there was and made all the decisions that were made. As for wild parties—you couldn't go very far or very fast in Duffy's hack, and that was all there was. No wonder we didn't burn up the highway!

We were useless then, at 19, and we kept right on being useless for many years to come. Some of us have never stopped We did not indulge in colorful crimes, but we were hysterical, peevish, unreasonable, helpless and pesty—which in the long run is much harder on the audience. And through our ignorance and helplessness many of us made a tragic mess of our lives.

On the other hand, Anne is extremely wise and efficient at 19. She has earned her own living for the last two years and she demands all the liberty and privileges which go with economic independence.

"But you're too young to manage your own life," wails her mother.

"Whadda y'u mean young?" demands Anne. "I'm older in a lot of ways than you are right now. I've done more and I've seen more than you'll ever know."

"How dare you talk to me that way! I'd never have dreamed of talking to my mother that way. You're so hard—"

"Well, you were soft and what did it buy you?" retorts Anne. "And I'm not hard—I'm just telling you the truth. It makes you mad to hear the truth."

Anne is rude, but correct. She ISN'T hard. She is simply awake. And she is probably more truly spiritual in her outlook than her mother ever was. She has a hunger for reality—and a hatred for fuzzy thinking—which her mother never had. She has pride, self-respect, a sense of fair play and a sportsmanlike courtesy.

She has a determination to make her life strong and definite and a contempt for the sentimental drifting which wrecked her mother's marriage. Reckless and rebellious? Yes. But she's reckless because she has almost a fanatical love of courage and she's rebellious because she hates the old flabby codes which wasted human life.

She's a gallant little adventurer, is Anne, with her square little jaw and her cold boiled eye. And in spite of mama's wheezes she's a hundred per cent bigger, braver human being than mama and I were at 19.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

WHEN I have won, how sweet the world has seemed, how kind and friendly every stranger's face, when I have clasped the vision that I dreamed, how easy then the way, how short the race! The span of my endeavor I review like some bright morning's hour of joyous climb, when up to heights and aspects fair and new I wandered in the fragrant Summer-time. When I have failed—ah! joy has flown away like some gay bird too fierce a wind could fright. Then songs and blossoms all have left the day, and day itself turned gloomy as the night! When I have failed, then rarer gains were mine than any triumphs noted near or far, for through the dimness I have found faith's shrine and through the shadows I have seen hope's star.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 19—The overflow from the Algonquin's round table seems to have lodged at Sardi's, a medium-priced cafe in W. 44th st. The Sardi crowd is composed of a bantering crew of columnists, press agents and second-string dramatic critics.

The management employed a caricaturist to sketch the Broadway figures who lunch there, and they stretch in paneled frames around the wall. This has whetted the curiosity of out-of-towners who know more about the Broadway personalities than the natives.

The Algonquin crowd, in its heyday—they say it is a thing of the past now—was supposed to be a little more "choosey" in its selections. They aimed to be distinguished, to dramatize themselves and frown a little on lesser nobodies. Human conceit probably never reached such an amusing altitude.

The saga of the Algonquin was that when they invited guests they must be of the literary eminence of a Michael Arlen or a Somerset Maugham. There have been a few ladies invited but as a general thing honors were for men. Peggy Wood was the only woman member.

The original group of Algonquinites had no pontifical notions. It included William B. Murray, Alexander Woollcott, Brock and Murdock Pemberton, Deems Taylor, Robert Benchley and Arthur Samuels. They were friends, and began rounding in there every noon for lunch.

Later some others were accepted at the board, and still others found their presence greeted by an ominous silence. Out of this, doubtless inspired by petty jealousy, grew charges of literary back-scratching and log-rolling. Some of it was true and the rest was a part of the legend.

Every great city offers these haunts, and myths about them expand. In the meanwhile it is probable there are many worthy literary figures who have no desire to be the object of a daily public "rubber-necking" at either the round table or Sardi's.

THE orange drink business has become such a mighty industry that Broadway is being called Orange Juice Gulch by such super stylists as Walter Winchell. In 1917 there were 13 stands in Manhattan. Now there are 124, and twice that number is planned for next year. The name Nedick, by which most of the stands are named, was coined from a combination of Neely and Dickinson, original founders. It made them millionaires. In some instances they pay $50,000 a year rentals for the holes in the wall.

TILED orange drinkeries draw a silk-hatted and low-necked clientele after the play. A shot of gin in the juice makes an aperitif for the midnight snack and saves time, highly important to galloping New Yorkers going nowhere.

THEATER patrons bargaining for cut-rate tickets at the auction under Gray's drug store nightly offer a hectic slice of metropolitan life in the heart of Broadway. Buyers stand on the side lines with their ladies, and when a show they want to see is priced agreeably, they make a head-down football rush. And come back a little jostled, but happy, with their tickets. There is a flying wedge of uniformed policemen to rescue those who may be swept off their feet in the melee.

Add insults of the week. A headwaiter's: "The next time you're in from the country drop around to see us."

After Gallivan

Big Man, Little Man, or Only Ordinary?

We learn from the reporters of politics that the quarter of a million people who dwell in the Twelfth Congressional District are beginning to give thought to the duty of choosing a Congressman.

What that means in English is that the politicians are trying to decide who is to have the late James A. Gallivan's place in Washington.

Five gentlemen are described as "avowed" candidates, which means that they have begun a canvass and do not deny it. These are State Senators John W. McCormack and W. L. Hennessey, former City Councillor James T. Moriarty, former Senator William Sullivan and former Assistant District Attorney Daniel M. Lyons.

Others are "suggested," among them Representative "Jimmy" Twohig, who has grown from boy to man in the Legislature and has made a good fight for real public ownership of the Elevated; former City Councillor George Gilbody, State Senator Robert E. Bigney and Eugene Kinnaly, who was Mr. Gallivan's secretary.

The list is almost certain to grow. In its present form it may be satisfactory to the voters of the Dorchester and South Boston wards who are to make the decision, but to the city at large, to Massachusetts and the rest of New England, it will seem to be conspicuously lacking.

If we lived in the district we should feel like starting a movement to draft a certain distinguished son of South Boston who never has had to be drafted when the enlistment was one that meant the greatest risk.

How can the Twelfth afford to look to the "chorus" for a successor to Gallivan, a NATIONAL figure, when there is a "star" available?
